

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. EXTRACTS FROM THE RECORDS OF THE TOWN OF BOSTON.

At a legal meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Boston, holden on the 11th day of Feb., A. D. 1795.

The article in the Warrant, viz: to take the sense of the town, on the propriety of adopting any further measures for the accommodation of the General Court with a piece of land for the purpose of erecting a new Court House,—read: as also the request for calling this meeting; and after debate had thereon,—

Voted, almost unanimously,—That William Tudor, William Eustis, Charles Jarvis, Perez Morton, John C. Jones, Esquires, Mr. Treasurer Russell, Thomas Dawes, Harrison G. Otis, and William Little, Esquires, be a Committee for the purpose of procuring for the Commonwealth a piece of land proper for building a State House, and that they be authorized to make any contract for the purchase of it, for that purpose; or to convey any piece of the land owned by the town, within the same, to the Commonwealth, which they may deem expedient for the interest of the town, for the purpose of erecting a State House; not alienating any part of the Common, unless the accommodation cannot be had on any other terms.

At a legal meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Boston, holden on the 13th day of May, A. D. 1795.

The Committee appointed at a town meeting, on the 11th day of February last, for the purpose of procuring for the Commonwealth a piece of land for building a State House, and that they be authorized to make any contract for the purchase of it, for that purpose; to convey any piece of lands owned by the town, within the same, to the Commonwealth, which they may deem expedient for the interest of the town, for the purpose of erecting a State House; not alienating any part of the Common, unless the accommodation cannot be had on any other terms,—

REPORT

That they have, in compliance with the aforesaid vote, purchased from the heirs of the late Gov. Hancock a piece of land, on the north-easterly side of the mansion-house of the late Gov. Hancock, commonly called the Governor's Pasture, at the price of Four Thousand Pounds,—and after receiving a deed of the same, have executed a deed in fee of the same premises to the Commonwealth, for the purpose aforesaid; that, in order to effect the purpose aforesaid, your Committee found it necessary to borrow of the Massachusetts and Union Banks, the Sum of £1000, and, on the same day, viz. the 6th of April last, gave their notes, on interest, for the remainder of the purchase-money, payable by instalments of three, six and nine months.

All which is submitted for the consideration and confirmation of the inhabitants of the Town.

By Order,

Boston, May 13, 1795.

WILLIAM TUDOR, CHAIRMAN.

The above Report was read, and accepted, and thereupon Voted: That the purchase of the premises therein mentioned, and the grant of the same to the Commonwealth, be, and hereby is confirmed.

To all people to whom these presents shall come: We, William Tudor, Charles Jarvis, John C. Jones, William Eustis, William Little, Thomas Dawes, Joseph Russell, Harrison G. Otis, and Perez Morton, all of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Esquires, a Committee of the town of Boston aforesaid, and in behalf of the inhabitants of said town, hereto lawfully authorized, send greeting:

Whereas the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts did, at their last session, by a resolution passed the fifteenth day of February last, resolve to erect, build, and finish a new State House, for the accommodation of all the Legislative and Executive branches of Government, on a spot of ground in Boston, commonly called the Governor's Pasture, provided the town of Boston would, at their expense, purchase, and cause the same to be conveyed in fee simple to the Commonwealth; and did appoint the Hon. Thomas Dawes, Edward H. Robbins, and Charles Bulfinch, Esq., Agents on the part of said Commonwealth, to erect the said buildings; and to receive a deed of said land. And Whereas, the aforesaid Committee, being thereto duly authorized by the inhabitants of said town of Boston, have purchased the said pasture, in fee to the inhabitants of said town, for the sum of Four Thousand Pounds, lawful money; and are also authorized to convey the same to the Commonwealth, in fee simple, agreeably to the proviso in the resolution aforesaid:—

Now therefore, know ye that we, the aforesaid Committee, under the authority aforesaid, in the name and on the behalf of the inhabitants of said town; in consideration of the premises, and of five shillings paid us by the Agents of the Commonwealth aforesaid, do hereby give, grant, and convey to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a certain piece of land, situate in Beacon Street aforesaid, commonly called

Gov. Hancock's Pasture : the same being butted and bounded as follows : beginning at the south-easterly corner of the garden of the late Gov. Hancock, and thence running an easterly course on Beacon Street, about two hundred and forty-three feet, three inches, more or less, to the corner of a street or passage-way, leading up Beacon Hill ; thence running a northerly course upon said passage-way, towards the summit of said hill, two hundred and forty-nine feet, more or less ; thence running a westerly course upon another passage-way leading round said hill, two hundred and thirty-five feet, and three inches, more or less, until it meets the north-easterly corner of the said late governor's garden ; thence, running on a line with said garden, nearly straight, about three hundred and seventy-one feet, to the first-mentioned bounds :—The above description being intended to comprise the said pasture, as it is now fenced in ; to have, and to hold, the above given and granted premises, and appurtenances, to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts aforesaid, in fee simple, forever, for the purpose of erecting, building, and finishing thereon a State House, for the accommodation of all the Legislative and Executive branches of the Government, and such other public buildings or offices, with the appurtenances, as may be necessary and convenient, and may be required for the suitable accommodation of the several departments of Government.

In witness whereof, we, the said Committee of the said town of Boston, in behalf of the said inhabitants of said town, by them hereto authorized, have hereunto set our hands and seals, this second day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety five.

STATE HOUSE.

The corner-stone of this edifice was laid July 4th, 1795, on land formerly owned by Governor Hancock, near the top of Beacon Hill. (This hill, which was originally 150 feet above high-water mark, was in 1804 levelled, the monument taken down, and the four slabs which formed the base, now remain to be seen at the foot of the stairs leading to the cupola.) This building is of an oblong form, 173 feet front and 51 deep. It consists of a basement story 20 feet high, and a principal story 30 feet. This is the centre of the front ; is covered with an attic 60 feet wide, 20 feet high, which is covered with a pediment. Immediately above this, rises a dome 52 feet in diameter, and 35 feet high ; the whole terminates with an elegant circular lantern, 25 feet high, supporting a gilded pine-cone. The lower story is finished plain on the wings, with square windows. The centre is 94 feet in length, and formed of arches which project 14 feet ; they form a covered walk below, and support a colonnade of Corinthian columns of the same extent above. The outside walls are of large patent bricks.

The lower story is divided into a large hall, or public walk, in the centre, 50 feet square and 20 feet high, supported by Doric columns. In the centre, and on the north side of this story, is placed the highly finished STATUE OF WASHINGTON, which will be noticed in another place.

Two entries open at each end, 16 feet wide, with two flights of stairs in each ; on both sides of which are offices. On the west wing, the secretary's department in front, and the adjutant-general's in the rear. On the east wing, the treasurer's department in front, and the land agent's and library in the rear.

In 1846, for the further accommodation of the library, the legislature made an appropriation for the finishing of a room in the basement story, under the west wing. The library is accessible to the members of the general court, at all times.

The rooms above are, the representatives' hall in the centre, 55 feet square. This hall is finished with Doric columns on two sides, 12 feet from the floor, forming galleries ; the Doric entablatures surround the whole ; from this spring four flat arches on the side, which, being united by a circular cornice above, form in the angles four large pendants to a bold and well-proportioned dome. The pendants are ornamented with emblems of commerce, agriculture, peace, and war. Directly over the speaker's chair, on the north side of the hall, is placed the state arms, and, a little above, may be seen the gilded eagle, just ready to fly, having in his beak a large scroll, with the following inscription, in large gilt letters: "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts." On the south side, opposite to the eagle, is the mammoth codfish, an emblem of the fisheries of Massachusetts, formerly in the old State House.

The centre of the dome is 50 feet from the floor; the speaker's chair is placed on the north side; the clerk on the right of the speaker; the permanent seats, in a semi-circular form, are so arranged as to accommodate 300 members on the floor; the front west gallery is for the use of members of the legislature; the rear gallery for the use of the public; east front gallery for the ladies; the rear gallery for the public.

In the east wing is the senate chamber, 55 feet long, 33 wide, and 30 high, highly finished in the Ionic order; two screens support, with entablatures, a rich and elegant arched ceiling. This room is also ornamented with Ionic pilasters, and with the arms of the State, and of the United States, placed in opposite panels. Directly opposite the door, is placed the president's chair; on the right and left, are seated the members, beginning with the oldest member in office on the right of the president. Forty members in this branch of the legislature.

In the west wing is the council chamber, 27 feet square, and 20 high, with a flat ceiling; the walls are finished with Corinthian pilasters, and panels of stucco. These panels are enriched with state arms, with emblems of executive power, the scale and sword of justice, and the insignia of arts and freedom, the caduceus and cap of liberty; the whole decorated with wreaths of oak and laurel. In the rear of this room, on the same floor, is a small room, called the governor's room, and the antechamber for the use of the committees of the council.

Besides these principal rooms, there are twenty-five smaller, for the use of the several committees. The cost of this building amounted to - - $133,333 33 It was first occupied by the legislature on the 11th January, 1798.

The foundation of this edifice is 110 feet above the level of the sea; its elevation and size make it a very conspicuous object. Two flights of stairs lead to the top of the outer dome, 170 steps from the lower floor. The view from this dome, which is 230 feet above the level of the sea, affords one of the most interesting and beautiful spectacles. The eye embraces, at once, every avenue and every public building in the city, and overlooks the towns adjacent, all speckled with white houses and country-seats, amidst groves and luxuriant fields. At our feet, on the right, we see the mansion-house of Hancock, (a venerable stone building, of over one hundred years' standing,) and in front is the beautiful common, like a splendid carpet of green, bounded on all sides by the malls, and enclosed by a magnificent iron fence, in the year 1837, at the expense of the city, of $100,000. The malls are mostly shaded by trees of various growth, over which, the great elm in the centre, (near the crescent pond,) seems to command the whole, with the majestic waving of his huge branches, the growth of more than one century. East, lie in full view the ocean and the harbor, bespangled with islands, almost as numerous, and said to be equally as charming, as those which beautify the Bay of Naples; which makes this view one of the most delightful panoramas that the world affords. Turning to the north, you have in view East Boston, Chelsea, Lynn, the city of Charlestown, (with the navy-yard, Bunker Hill and monument;) to the west you have in view Somerville, the city of Cambridge, (with Harvard University,) West Cambridge, and Brighton; and to the south, you have in view Brookline, the city of Roxbury, Dorchester, and Quincy.

Visitors to the cupola, for three last years, 1845, 6, and 7, average 50,000 per annum.

THE STATUE OF WASHINGTON.

The plan for erecting a monument to the memory of Washington, in Boston, first originated with gentlemen who had been associated with him in early life.

A meeting was called, and a society organized, under the title of the Washington Monument Association. April 27, 1811.

The sum of $16,000 was subscribed by the time the statue was finished. It cost, together with the pedestal and the temple in which it is placed, $15,000.

As the visitor enters the State House, at the south front, he beholds the statue, through the arched passage-way that leads from the Doric hall to the apartment where it is placed. It is free to the public at all times, with the exception of Sundays, Thanksgiving and Fast days, on which the house is closed, in obedience to an order of the general court.

The authorities of the state signified their acceptance of the statue, on the 8th of January, 1828, when it was "Resolved, that the legislature of this Commonwealth accept the Statue of Washington, upon the terms and conditions on which it is offered by the trustees of the Washington Monument Association, and entertain a just sense of the patriotic feeling of those individuals who have done honor to the state, by placing in it a statue of the man whose life was among the greatest of his country's blessings, and whose fame is her proudest inheritance."

EARLY HISTORY OF NEW ENGLAND.

[The following detached extracts, running through a series of years, will afford a tolerable idea of the character and importance of the business transacted by our Puritan forefathers at the Court of Assistants.]

Sept. 7th, 1630.—Ordered, that John B.— shall be whipped, for shooting a fowl on the Sabbath day.

Ordered, that all R. C.—'s strong water shall presently be seized upon, for his selling great quantities thereof to several men-servants, which was the occasion of much disorder, drunkenness, and misdemeanor.

Ordered, that no master carpenter, mason, joiner, or bricklayer, shall take above sixteen shillings a day for their work, if they have meat and drink; and the second sort, not above twelve shillings a day, under pain of ten pounds, &c. to giver and receiver.

Ordered, that laborers shall not take above twelve pence a day for their work; and not above six pence and meat and drink, under pain of, &c.

Nov. 9th, 1630.—Ordered, that Sir Richard S.— is fined five pounds, for whipping two several persons without the presence of another Assistant, contrary to an act of the Court.

Ordered, that Thomas M—— shall pay unto Mrs. B. G—— before the 8th of December next, or else be whipped for the wrong he did Mr. G——, in coming from Plymouth, being master of his boat, and leaving him without a pilot.

May 3d, 1631.—Ordered, that John L——, servant of Mr. H——, shall be severely whipped, this day, at Boston, and afterwards, so soon as conveniently may be, at Salem, for striking Richard W——, when he came to give him correction for idleness in his master's work.

June 14th, 1631.—Ordered, that Philip R—— shall be whipped, have his ears cut off, fined forty pounds, and banished out of the limits of this jurisdiction, for uttering malicious and fraudulent speeches against the government and the church of Salem, &c., as appeared by a particular thereof, proved upon oath.

Ordered, that no person whatever shall buy corn, or any other provision, of any ship or bark that comes into this bay, without leave from the Governor, or some other of the Assistants.

Ordered, that Chickataubut (Sachem of the Massachusetts Indians) is fined a skin of beaver, for shooting a swine of Sir Richard S——.

Sept. 6th, 1631.—Ordered, that Henry L—— shall be whipped and banished from the Plantations, before the 6th day of October next, for writing into England, falsely and maliciously, against the government and execution of justice here.

May 19th, 1632.—Ordered, that the Court, taking into consideration the great mercy of God, vouchsafed to the churches of God in Germany and the Palatinate, &c., hath appointed the 13th day of this present month, to be kept as a day of public thanksgiving throughout the several Plantations.

July 3d, 1632.—Ordered, that Mr. James P—— is fined ten pounds, and bound to his good behavior till the next Court, for his misdemeanors and drunkenness, committed on board the Virginia ship.

Aug. 7th, 1632.—Ordered, that the remainder of Mr. A——'s strong water, being estimated about two gallons, shall be delivered into the hands of the deacons of Dorchester, for the benefit of the poor there, for his selling of it, divers times, to such as were drunk with it, he knowing thereof.

Oct. 3d, 1632.—It is thought, by general consent, that Boston is the fittest place for public meetings of any place in the bay.

Nov. 7th, 1632.—Ordered, that the inhabitants of Boston shall have liberty to fetch wood from Dorchester Neck for twenty years, the proprietary of the land to remain to Dorchester.

Ordered, that Sir Richard S—— shall give Sagamore John a hogshead of corn, for the hurt his cattle did him in his corn.

March 4th, 1632.—Ordered, that Thomas D—— shall be set in the bilboes, disfranchised, and fined ten pounds, for speaking reproachful and seditious words against the government here established, and finding fault, to divers persons, with the acts of the Court; saying, This captious government will bring all to naught; adding, that the best of them was but an attorney, &c.

Ordered, that Boston is assessed five pounds, Charlestown four pounds, Roxbury six pounds, Watertown six pounds, Newton six pounds, Medford three pounds, for the maintenance of Capt. Underhill and Capt. Pattrick for half a year.

Ordered, that the price of corn, formerly bestrained to six shillings the bushel, is now set at liberty to be sold as men can agree.

Ordered, that Joyce B—— shall give unto Alexander B—— the sum of twenty shillings, for promising him marriage without her friends' consent, and now refusing to perform the same.

Oct. 1st, 1633.—Ordered, that Sargent P—— shall carry forty turfs to the fort, as a punishment for drunkenness by him committed.

March 4th, 1633.—Ordered, that Robert C——, for drunkenness by him committed at Roxbury, shall be disfranchised,—wear about his neck, and so hang upon his outside garment, a D, made of red cloth, and set upon white, to continue there for a year, and not to leave off at any time when he comes amongst company, under a penalty of ten pounds for the first offence, and five the second, and after, to be punished by the Court as they think meet. Also, he is to wear the D outwards, and is to appear at the next General Court, and to continue there till the Court be ended.

Ordered, that Timothy H—— and John P—— are fined twenty shillings apiece, for misspending their time in company keeping, drinking strong water and selling other, contrary to an order of Court.

Ordered, that there shall be a market kept at Boston, upon every Thursday, the fifth day of the week.

Ordered, that Edward H—— is fined twenty shillings, for selling strong water, contrary to an order of Court.

Sept. 3d, 1634.—Ordered, that no person that keeps an ordinary shall take above sixpence a meal for a person, and not above a penny for an ale quart of beer, out of meal time, under the penalty of ten shillings for every offence, either of diet or beer.

Ordered, that victuallers, or keepers of an ordinary, shall not suffer any tobacco in their houses, under penalty of five shillings.

Ordered, that no person shall take tobacco publicly, under the penalty of two shillings and sixpence, nor privately in his own house, or in the house of another, before strangers; and that two or more shall not take it together anywhere, under the aforesaid penalty.

Oct. 6th, 1634.—Ordered, that John L—— shall be whipped, and fined ten pounds, for speaking reproachfully of the Governor, saying he was but a lawyer's clerk; also, taxing the Court for making laws to pinch men's purses; also, abusing a maid of the Governor's, pretending love, in the way of marriage, when himself professes he intended none; as also, for enticing her to go with him into the cornfield, &c.

William K—— is bound, in ten pounds, to appear at the next Court, and to abide the censure of the Court, for swearing.

Ordered, that Jane H——, the wife of Richard H——, had liberty till the beginning of the third month, called May; and the magistrates (if she did not depart before) to dispose of her. And, in the mean time, she is not to meddle in surgery or physic, drinks, plaisters, oils, nor to question matters of religion, except with the elders, for satisfaction.

May 6th, 1635.—Ordered, that no person whatsoever shall keep any pigs for longer time than one month, that shall fall betwixt the last of July and the first of January, under a penalty of ten shillings for every pig.

Sept. 1st, 1635.—Ordered, that Mary, servant to Mr. B——, shall be whipped, for running from her master, and shall serve him six weeks after her time is ended.

Ordered, that John B—— shall be whipped, and bound to his good behavior, for striking his mother, Mrs. Weston, and deriding of her, and for divers other misdemeanors.

Ordered, that John C—— shall be whipped, for stealing a sheep and a pair of shoes.

Ordered, that Peter B—— is censured for drunkenness, to be whipped, and to have twenty stripes sharply inflicted, and fined five pounds, for slighting the magistrates on what they could do, saying they could but fine him.

The Deputy Governor hath leave from the Court to entertain an Indian into his family.

Whereas, Mr. Roger W——, one of the elders of the church of Salem, hath broached and divulged divers new and dangerous opinions, against the authority of magistrates and churches here, and that before any conviction, and yet maintaineth the same without retraction; it is therefore ordered, that the said Mr. W—— shall depart out of this jurisdiction within six weeks, now next coming; which, if he neglect to perform, it shall be lawful for the Governor and two of the magistrates to send him to some place out of this jurisdiction, not to return any more without license from the Court.

Joshua H—— has forfeit five pound, for knives, and four and sixpence, for a scythe, which he sold for above fourpence in the shilling profit.

Capt. Mason is authorized by the Court to press men and carts, to help towards the finishing of the fort at Castle Island, for all manner of work that is to be done there.

April 5th, 1636.—The Court was holden at Newton.

Elizabeth, wife of Thomas A——, was censured to stand with her tongue in a cleft stick, for swearing, railing, and reviling.

With the consent and the desire of Henry S——, and Ellen his wife, the Court hath ordered, that his said wife shall be at her own disposal for the place of her habitation; and that her husband shall allow her her wearing apparel and twenty pounds per annum, to be paid quarterly, as also a bed, with furniture with it.

Thomas P——, for suspicion of slander, idleness, and stubbornness, is censured to be severely whipped and kept in hold.

April 4th, 1637.—Richard O—— was enjoined to give an account to the constable, weekly, how he doth improve his time; and if he neglect, further order to be taken by putting him to the castle.

Edward S——, for his beastly drunkenness, was censured to be set in the bilboes till the end of the Court, and then to be severely whipped.

George M—— was fined twenty shillings, for selling beer, and keeping a house of entertainment, without license.

Isaac D—— was ordered to be sent home to his wife, to England, and the care thereof is committed to Salem.

Samuel C—— was fined ten shillings, for selling a quart of beer at twopence.

James B—— was censured for drunkenness, to be set two hours in the bilboes upon market-day in Boston, publicly. And the said James B——, was fined forty shillings, for selling strong water to the Indians, without license.

Benjamin H— was also solemnly admonished of his failing, for being in company with James B— and the rest, and often drinking of the strong water bottle with them, and not reproving them.

Mr. John G—, of New Providence, having spoken against the magistrates contemptuously, stands bound, in one hundred marks, to appear at the next quarter Court. The name of Bare Cove is changed, hereafter to be called Hingham.

July 27th, 1637.—Ordered, that no person shall sell any cakes or buns, either in market or victualling houses, or elsewhere, upon pain of ten shillings fine; provided, that this order shall not extend to such cakes as shall be made for any burial or marriage, or such like especial occasion.

Thomas S—, being accused for speaking against the order of Court, about swine, and the same proved, that he said the law was against God's law, and he would not obey it, so he was committed and enjoined to acknowledge his fault; at the Court, the 14th, he was fined twenty shillings, and to give security for his fine, or pay the same before his releasement.

Ordered, that Mrs. H—n shall be gone by the last of this month. And if she be not gone before, she is to be sent away by the Council, without delay, by the first opportunity; and for the charges of keeping Mrs. H—, order is to be given by the Council (if it be not satisfied) to levy it, by distress, on her husband's goods.

April 4th, 1638.—These four gentlemen, afternamed, Mr. John H—, Mr. John W—, Jr., Mr. Atherton H—, and Mr. Edward R—, were fined five shillings apiece, for their absence when the Court was called.

Clement B—, his wife is enjoined not to come into the company of A. Warren.

William B— being presented for drunkenness, it was found the falling sickness.

Lawrence W—'s wife was enjoined to give John F— eighteen pence, and Nico. T— to give John F— eighteen shillings, and Edward L— to give him two shillings; and Edward L— was fined fifteen shillings sixpence, for his contempt; and all of them were admonished to avoid dancing.

Catharine, the wife of Samuel F—, being accused for speaking against the magistrates, against the churches, and against the elders, was censured to be whipped, and committed till the General Court.

The town of Lynn is fined twenty shillings, and enjoined to mend their ways before next Court.

Thomas E— is fined forty shillings, for leaving his pit or well open, in which a child was drowned.

Mr. William F—, appearing, was informed that we conceive him not fit to live with us; therefore he was wished to depart before the General Court, March next.

Francis W—'s wife was censured to be set two hours in the bilboes here, and two hours at Salem, upon a lecture day.

Intimation to be given to the elders of each church of the desire of the Court to keep the last Thursday of the eighth month a day of thanksgiving, for the safe coming of so many ships, this year and in the spring, and now to ripen the harvest.

Robert Shorthose was committed for saying, if the magistrate had anything to say to him, he might come to him. He was released, binding himself in twenty pounds to appear at the next Court, and to be of good behavior the mean time.

INDIANS OF MASSACHUSETTS IN 1630.

They took the first ship they saw for a walking island; the masts to be trees; the sails, white clouds; and the discharge of ordnance, lightning and thunder, which did much trouble them. But this thunder being over, and this moving island steadied with an anchor, they manned out their canoes to go and pick strawberries there. They do much extol and wonder at the English for their strange inventions, especially for a wind-mill, which, in their esteem, was little less than the world's wonder, for the strangeness of his whisking motion, and the sharp teeth, biting the corn (as they term it) into such little pieces: they were loth, at first, to come near his long arms, or to abide in so tottering a tabernacle, though now they dare go anywhere, so far as they have an English guide. The first ploughman was counted little better than a juggler. The Indians, seeing the plough tear up more ground in a day than their clamshells could scrape up in a month, desired to see the workmanship of it, and, viewing well the coulter and share, and perceiving it to be of iron, told the ploughman he was almost abamicho,—almost as cunning as the devil. They frequent often English churches, where they sit soberly, though they understand not such hidden mysteries. They have two sorts of games, one called puim, the other hub-bub. They are so bewitched by these two games, that they lose, sometimes, all they have, beaver, kettles, moose-skins, wamponpeage, mowhackies, hatchets, and knives, is all confiscated by these two games.

BOSTON TEA PARTY.

[From the Boston Gazette of Dec. 6, 1773—recopied in the Mercantile Journal of Dec. 15, 1849.]

BOSTON, December 6, 1773.

At a Meeting of the PEOPLE of Boston, and the neighboring Towns at Faneuil-Hall, in said Boston, on Monday, the 29th of November, 1773, Nine o'Clock, A. M. and continued by Adjournment to the next Day; for the Purpose of consulting, advising and determining upon the most proper and effectual Method to prevent the unloading, receiving or vending the detestable TEA sent out by the East India Company, Part of which being just arrived in this Harbour:

IN Order to proceed with due Regularity, it was moved that a Moderator be chosen, and JONATHAN WILLIAMS, Esq., was then chosen Moderator of the Meeting.

A Motion was made that as the Town of Boston had determined at a late Meeting legally assembled, that they would to the utmost of their Power prevent the landing of the Tea, the Question be put, Whether this Body are absolutely determined that the Tea now arrived in Capt. Hall shall be returned to the Place from whence it came at all Events. And the Question being accordingly put, it passed in the Affirmative. Nem. Con.

It appearing that the Hall could not contain the People assembled, it was Voted, that the Meeting be immediately Adjourned to the Old South Meeting-House, Leave having been obtained for this Purpose.

The People met at the Old South according to the Adjournment.

A Motion was made, and the Question put, viz. Whether it is the firm Resolution of this Body that the Tea shall not only be sent back, but that no Duty shall be paid thereon, and passed in the Affirmative. Nem. Con.

It was moved that in order to give Time to the Consignees to consider and deliberate, before they sent in their Proposals to this Body, as they had given Reason to expect would have been done at the opening of the Meeting, there might be an adjournment to Three o'Clock, P. M. and the Meeting was accordingly for that Purpose adjourned.

THREE o'Clock, P. M., met according to Adjournment.

A Motion was made, Whether the Tea now arrived in Captain Hall's Ship shall be sent back in the same Bottom—Passed in the Affirmative, Nem. Con.

Mr. Rotch the Owner of the Vessel being present, informed the Body that he should enter his Protest against their Proceedings.

It was then moved and voted, nem. con. That Mr. Rotch be directed not to enter this Tea; and that the Doing of it would be at his Peril.

Also Voted, That Captain Hall the Master of the Ship, be informed that at his Peril he is not to suffer any of the Tea brought by him, to be landed.

A motion was made, That in Order for the Security of Captain Hall's Ship and Cargo, a Watch may be appointed—and it was voted that a Watch be accordingly appointed to consist of 25 men.

Capt. Edward Proctor was appointed by the Body to be the Capt. of the Watch for this Night, and the names were given in to the Moderator of the Townsmen who were Volunteers on the Occasion.

It having been observed to the Body, that Governor Hutchinson had required the Justices of the Peace in this Town to meet and use their Endeavours to suppress any Riots or Riots, &c. of the People that might happen—It was moved and the Question put—Whether it be not the Sense of this Meeting, that the Governor's Conduct herein carries a design'd Reflection upon the People here met; and is solely calculated to serve the views of Administration—Passed in the Affirmative, nem. con.

The People being informed by Col. Hancock, that Mr. Copley, Son-in-Law to Mr. Clarke, Sen. had acquainted him that the Tea Consignees did not receive their Letters from London till last Evening, and were so dispersed, that they could not have a joint Meeting early enough to make their Proposals at the time intended; and therefore were desirous of a further Space for that Purpose.

The Meeting out of great Tenderness to these Persons, and from a strong Desire to bring this Matter to a Conclusion, notwithstanding the Time they had hitherto expended upon them to no Purpose, were prevailed upon to adjourn to the next Morning Nine o'Clock.

TUESDAY Morning Nine o'Clock.

Met according to Adjournment

THE long expected Proposals were at length brought into the Meeting, not directed to the Moderator but to John Scollay, Esq.; one of the Selectmen—It was however voted that the same should be read, and they are as follows, viz:

Monday, Nov. 29th, 1773.

SIR,

WE are sorry that we could not return to the Town satisfactory Answers to their two late messages to us respecting the Teas; we beg Leave to acquaint the Gentlemen Selectmen that we have since received our Orders from the Honorable East India Company.

We still retain a Disposition to do all in our Power to give Satisfaction to the Towns, but as we understood from you and the other Gentlemen Selectmen at Mess. Clarke's Interview with you last Saturday, that this can be effected by nothing less than our sending back the Teas, we beg leave to say, that this is utterly out of our Power to do, but we do now declare to you our Readiness to Store the Teas until we shall have Opportunity of writing to our Constituents and shall receive their further Orders respecting them; and we do most sincerely wish that the Town considering the unexpected Difficulties devolved upon us will be satisfied with what we now offer.

We are, Sir,

Your most humble Servants,

*Tho. and Elisha Hutchinson
Benja. Faneuil, jun. for Self and Joshua Winslow, Esq.;
Rich'd Clarke and Sons.*

John Scollay, Esq.

Mr. Sheriff Greenleaf came into the Meeting and begg'd Leave of the Moderator that a Letter he had received from the Governor, requiring him to read a Proclamation to the People here assembled might be read; and it was accordingly read.

Whereupon it was moved, and the Question put, Whether the Sheriff should be permitted to read the Proclamation—which passed in the Affirmative, nem. con.

The Proclamation is as follows, viz:

Massachusetts

Bay.

By the Governor.

To JONATHAN WILLIAMS, Esq; acting as Moderator of an Assembly of People in the Town of Boston, and to the People so assembled:

WHEREAS printed Notifications were on Monday the 29th Instant, posted in divers places in the Town of Boston and published in the News-Papers of that Day calling upon the People to Assemble together for certain unlawful Purposes in such Notifications mentioned: And whereas great Numbers of People belonging to the Town of Boston, and divers others belonging to several other Towns in the Province, did assemble in the said Town of Boston, on the said Day, and did then and there proceed to chuse a Moderator, and to consult, debate and resolve upon Ways and Means for carrying such unlawful Purposes into execution; openly violating, defying and setting at naught the good and wholesome Laws of the Province and the Constitution of Government under which they live: And whereas the People thus assembled did vote or agree to adjourn or continue their meeting to this the 30th Instant, and great Numbers of them are again met or assembled together for the like Purposes in the said Town of Boston.

In Faithfulness to my Trust and as His Majesty's Representative within the Province I am bound to bear Testimony against this Violation of the Laws and I warn exhort and require you and each of you thus unlawfully assembled forthwith to disperse and to surcease all further unlawful Proceedings at your utmost Peril.

Given under my Hand at Milton in the Province aforesaid the 30th Day of November 1773 and in the fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign.

By His Excellency's Command,
THO'S FLUCKER, Sec'y.

T. HUTCHINSON.

And the same being read by the Sheriff, there was immediately after, a loud and very general Hiss.

A Motion was then made, and the Question put, Whether the Assembly would disperse and surcease all further Proceedings, according to the Governor's Requirement—It pass'd in the Negative, nem. con.

A proposal of Mr. Copley was made, that in Case he could prevail with the Mess. Clarkes to come into this Meeting, the Question might now be put. Whether they should be treated with Civility while in the Meeting, though they might be of different Sentiments with this Body; and their Persons be safe until their Return to the Place from whence they should come—And the Question being accordingly put passed in the affirmative, Nem. Con.

Another Motion of Mr. Copley was put, Whether two Hours shall be given him, which also passed in the Affirmative.

Adjourn'd to Two o'Clock, P. M.

Two o'Clock P. M. met according to Adjournment.

A Motion was made and passed, that Mr. Rotch and Capt. Hall be desired to give their Attendance.

Mr. Rotch appeared, and upon a Motion made the Question was put, Whether it is the firm Resolution of this Body, that the Tea brought by Capt. Hall shall be returned by Mr. Rotch to England in the Bottom in which it came; and whether they accordingly now require the same, which passed in the affirmative, Nem. Con.

Mr. Rotch then informed the meeting that he should protest against the whole Proceedings as he had done against the Proceedings on Yesterday but that tho' the returning the Tea is an involuntary Act in him, he yet considers himself as under a Necessity to do it, and shall therefore comply with the Requirement of this Body.

Capt. Hall being present was forbid to aid or assist in unloading the Tea at his Peril, and ordered that if he continues Master of the Vessel, he carry the same back to London; who reply'd he should comply with these Requirements.

Upon a Motion, Resolved, That John Rowe Esq; Owner of Part of Capt. Bruce's Ship expected with Tea, as also Mr. Timmins, Factor for Capt. Coffin's Brig, be desired to attend.

Mr. Ezekiel Cheever was appointed Captain of the Watch for this Night, and a sufficient Number of Volunteers gave in their Names for that Service.

Voted, That the Captain of this Watch be desired to make out a List of the Watch for the next Night, and so each Captain of the Watch for the following Nights until the Vessels leave the Harbour.

Upon a Motion made, Voted, that in Case it should happen that the Watch should be any Ways molested in the Night, while on Duty, they give the Alarm to the inhabitants by the tolling of the Bells—and that if any Thing happens in the Day Time, the Alarm be by ringing of the Bells.

Voted, That six persons be appointed to be in Readiness to give due Notice to the Country Towns when they shall be required so to do, upon any important Occasion. And six Persons were accordingly chosen for that Purpose.

John Rowe, Esq; attended, and was informed that Mr. Rotch had engaged that his Vessel should carry back the Tea she bro't in the same Bottom, and that it was the Expectation of this Body that he does the same by the Tea expected in Capt. Bruce; whereupon he replied that the Ship was under the Care of the said Master, but that he would use his utmost Endeavour, that it should go back as required by this Body, and that he would give immediate Advice of the Arrival of said Ship.

Voted, That it is the Sense of this Body that Capt Bruce shall on his Arrival strictly conform to the Votes passed respecting Capt. Hall's Vessel, as tho' they had been all passed in Reference to Capt. Bruce's Ship.

Mr. Timmins appeared and informed that Capt. Coffin's Brig expected with Tea was owned in Nantucket, he gave his Word of Honor that no Tea should be landed while she was under his Care, nor touched by any one until the Owner's Arrival.

It was then Voted, That what Mr. Rowe and Mr. Timmins had offered was satisfactory to the Body.

Mr. Copley returned and acquainted the Body, that as he had been obliged to go to the Castle, he hoped that if he had exceeded the Time allowed him they would consider the Difficulty of a Passage by Water at this Season as his Apology; He then further acquainted the Body, that he had seen all the Consignees, and tho' he had convinced them that they might attend this Meeting with safety, and had used his utmost Endeavours to prevail upon them to give Satisfaction to the Body; they acquainted him, that believing nothing would be satisfactory short of re-shipping the Tea, which was out of their power, they thought it best not to appear, but would renew their Proposal of storing the Tea, and submitting the same to the inspection of a Committee, and that they could go no farther, without incurring their own Ruin; but as they had not been active in introducing the Tea, they should do nothing to obstruct the People in their Procedure with the same.

It was then Moved, and the Question put, Whether the return made by Mr. Copley from the Consignees, be in the Least Degree satisfactory to this Body, and passed in the Negative. Nem. Con.

Whereas, a Number of Merchants in this Province have inadvertently imported Tea from Great Britain, while it is subject to the Payment of a Duty imposed upon it by an Act of the British Parliament for the Purpose of raising a Revenue in America, and appropriating the same without the consent of those who are required to pay it;

Resolved, That in thus importing said Tea, they have justly incur'd the Displeasure of our Brethren in the other Colonies.

And resolved further, That if any Person or Persons shall hereafter import Tea from Great Britain, or if any Master or Masters of any Vessel or Vessels in Great Britain shall take the same on board to be imported to this Place until the said unrighteous Act shall be repeal'd he or they shall be deem'd by this Body an Enemy to his country, and we will prevent the Landing and Sale of the same, and the payment of any Duty thereon. And we will effect the Return thereof to the Place from whence it shall come.

RESOLVED, That the foregoing Vote be printed and sent to England, and all the Sea Ports in this Province.

Upon a Motion made, Voted, That fair Copies be taken of the whole Proceedings of this meeting, and transmitted to New York and Philadelphia. And that

MR. SAMUEL ADAMS,
Hon. JOHN HANCOCK, Esq.,
WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Esq.,
JOHN ROWE, Esq.,
JONATHAN WILLIAMS, Esq.,

Be a Committee to transmit the same.

Voted, That it is the Determination of this Body, to carry their Votes and Resolutions into Execution, at the Risque of their Lives and Property.

Voted, That the Committee of Correspondence for this Town, be desired to take Care that every other Vessel with Tea that arrives in this Harbour, have a proper Watch appointed for her. Also Voted, That those Persons who are desirous of making a Part of these Nightly Watches be desired to give in their Names at Messieurs Edes and Gill's Printing Office.

Voted, That our Brethren in the Country be desired to afford their Assistance upon the first Notice given; especially if such Notice be given upon the Arrival of Captain Loring, in Messieurs Clarke's Brigantine.

Voted, That those of this Body who belong to the Town of Boston do return their Thanks to the Indian manner, who have come from the Neighbouring Towns, for their Countenance and Union with this Body in this Exigence of our Affairs.

Voted, That the Thanks of this Meeting be given to JONATHAN WILLIAMS, Esq.; for his good services as Moderator.

Voted, That this Meeting be Dissolved — And it was accordingly Dissolved.

A sketch of the subsequent events we copy from the Boston Gazette, printed at the time:

"Just before the dissolution of the meeting, a number of brave and resolute men, dressed in the Indian manner, approached near the door of the assembly, and gave the war-hoop, which rang through the house, and was answered by some in the galleries, but silence was commanded, and a peaceable deportment again enjoined till the dissolution. The Indians as they were then called, repaired to the wharf where the ships lay that had the tea on board, and were followed by hundreds of people, to see the event of the transactions of those who made so grotesque an appearance. They, the Indians, immediately repaired on board Capt. Hall's ship where they hoisted out the chests of tea, and when on deck, stove the chests and hove the tea overboard. Having cleared this ship, they proceeded to Captain Bruce's, and then to Captain Coffin's brig. They applied themselves so dexterously to the destruction of this commodity, that in the space of three hours they broke up 342 chests, which was the whole number in those vessels, and discharged their contents into the dock. When the tide rose it floated the broken chests and the tea, insomuch that the surface of the water was filled therewith a considerable way from the south part of the town to Dorchester Neck, and lodged on the shores. There was the greatest care taken to prevent the tea from being purloined by the populace. One or two being detected in endeavoring to pocket a small quantity, were stripped of their acquisitions and very roughly handled. * * * The town was very quiet during the whole evening and the night following. Those who were from the country went home, and the next day joy appeared in almost every countenance—some on occasion of the destruction of the tea, others on account of the quietness with which it was effected—One of the Monday's papers says, that the masters and owners are well pleased that the ships are thus cleared."

LETTERS OF GEN. WASHINGTON.

General Washington's Letter, dated June 20th, 1775, at Philadelphia, to the Independent Companies of Fairfax, Prince Williams, Fauquier, Spotsylvania and Richmond.

GENTLEMEN,

I am now about to bid adieu to the Companies under your respective commands, at least for a while. I have launched into a wide and extensive field, too boundless for my abilities, and far, very far, beyond my experience. I am called, by the unanimous voice of the colonies, to the command of the Continental Army; an honor I did not aspire to, an honor I was solicitous to avoid, upon a full conviction of my inadequacy to the importance of the service. The partiality of the Congress, however, assisted by a political motive, rendered my reasons unavailing; and I shall to-morrow, set out for the camp near Boston. I have only to beg of you, therefore, before I go (especially as you did me the honor to put your Companies under my direction, and know not how soon you may be called upon in Virginia for an exertion of your military skill,) by no means to relax in the discipline of your respective Companies.

Head Quarters, Cambridge, August 11th, 1775.

SIR,

I understand that the Officers engaged in the cause of Liberty and their Country, who by the fortune of war have fallen into your hands, have been thrown indiscriminately into a common Jail, appropriated for felons,—that no consideration has been had for those of the most respectable rank, when languishing with wounds and sickness—that some of them have been even amputated in this unworthy situation. Let your opinion, Sir, of the principle which actuates them to be what it may, they suppose they act from the noblest of all principles, a love of freedom and their country. But political opinions, I conceive, are foreign to this point. The obligations arising from the rights of humanity, and claims of rank, are universally binding and extensive, except in case of retaliation. These I should have hoped, would have dictated a more tender treatment of those individuals, whom chance of war had put in your power. Nor can I forbear suggesting its fatal tendency to widen that unhappy breach, which you, and those ministers under whom you act, have repeatedly declared you wish to see forever closed.

My duty now makes it necessary to apprise you, that for the future I shall regulate my conduct towards those gentlemen, who are or may be in our possession, exactly by the rule you shall observe towards those of ours, now in your custody.

If severity and hardship mark the line of your conduct (painful as it may be to me) your prisoners will feel its effects, but if kindness and humanity are shown to ours, I shall with pleasure consider those in our hands only as unfortunate, and they shall receive from me that treatment, to which the unfortunate are ever entitled.

I beg to be favored with an answer, as soon as possible, and am,

Sir, your very humble servant,

His Excellency, Gen. GAGE.

G. WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 13th, 1775.

SIR,

To the glory of civilized nations, humanity and war have been compatible; and compassion to the subdued is become almost a general system.

Britons, ever pre-eminent in mercy, have out-gone common examples and overlooked the criminal in the captive. Upon these principles your prisoners, whose lives by the laws of the land are destined to the cord, have hitherto been treated with care and kindness, and more comfortably lodged than the King's troops in the hospitals; indiscriminately it is true, for I acknowledge no rank, that is not derived from the King.

My intelligence from your Army would justify severe recrimination. I understand there are of the king's faithful subjects, taken some time since by the rebels, labouring like negro-slaves to gain their daily subsistence, or reduced to the wretched alternative, to perish by famine, or take arms against their king and country. Those who have made the treatment of the prisoners in my hands or of your other friends in Boston, a pretence for such measures, found barbarity upon falsehood.

I would willingly hope, Sir, that the sentiments of liberality, which I have always believed you to possess, will be exerted to correct these misdoings. Be temperate in political disquisition; give free operation to truth, and punish those who deceive and misrepresent, and not only the effects, but the causes of this unhappy conflict will be removed.

Should those under whose usurped authority you act, control such a disposition, and dare to call severity retaliation, to God who knows all hearts, be the appeal for the dreadful consequences. I trust that British soldiers, asserting the rights of the state, the laws of the land, the being of the constitution, will meet all events with becoming fortitude. They will court victory, with the spirit their cause inspires, and from the same motive will find the patience of martyrs under misfortune.

Till I read your insinuations in regard to ministers, I conceived that I had acted under the King; whose wishes, it is true, as well as those of his ministers, and of every honest man, have been to see this unhappy breach forever closed; but unfortunately for both countries, those who long since projected the present crisis, and influence the councils of America, have views very distant from accommodation.

I am, Sir, your most Obedient, humble Servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq.

THOMAS GAGE.

Cambridge, (Head Quarters,) August 19, 1775.

SIR,

I addressed you on the eleventh instant, in terms which gave the fairest scope for the exercise of that humanity and politeness, which were supposed to form a part of your character. I remonstrated with you on the unworthy treatment shown to the officers and citizens of America, whom the fortune of war, chance, or a mistaken confidence, had thrown into your hands.

Whether British or American mercy, fortitude, and patience, are most pre-eminent—whether our virtuous citizens, whom the hand of tyranny has forced into arms, to defend their wives, their children and their property, or the mercenary instruments of lawless domination, avarice and revenge, best deserve the appellation of rebels, and the punishment of that cord, which your affected clemency has forborne to inflict; whether the authority under which I act, is usurped, or founded upon the genuine principles of Liberty, were altogether foreign to the subject.

I purposely avoided all political disquisition; nor shall I now avail myself of those advantages, which the sacred cause of my country, of liberty, and human nature give me over you, much less shall I stoop to retort and invective. But the intelligence you say you have received from our army requires a reply. I have taken time, Sir, to make a strict inquiry, and find it has not the least foundation in truth. Not only your officers and soldiers have been treated with a tenderness due to fellow citizens and brethren, but even those execrable parricides, whose councils and aid have deluged their country with blood, have been protected from the fury of a justly enraged people. Far from compelling or permitting their assistance, I am embarrassed with the numbers who crowd to our camp, animated with the purest principles of virtue, and love of their country. You advise me to give free operation to truth, to punish misrepresentation and falsehood.

If experience stamps value upon counsel, yours must have a weight which few can claim. You best can tell how far the convulsion, which has brought such ruin on both countries, and shaken the mighty empire of Britain to its foundation, may be traced to these malignant causes. You affect, Sir, to despise all rank, not derived from the same source with your own. I cannot conceive one more honorable than that, which flows from the uncorrupted choice of a brave and free people, the purest source and original fountain of all power. Far from making it a plea for cruelty, a mind of true magnanimity and enlarged ideas would comprehend and respect it.

What may have been the ministerial views, which have precipitated the present crisis, Lexington, Concord, and Charlestown can best declare. May that God, to whom you then appeal, judge between America and you. Under his providence, those who influence the councils of America, and all the other inhabitants of the United Colonies, at the hazard of their lives, are determined to hand down to posterity those just and invaluable privileges which they received from their ancestors.

I shall now, Sir, close my correspondence with you; perhaps forever. If your officers, our prisoners, receive a treatment different from what I wished to show them, they and you will remember the occasion of it.

I am Sir, your very humble Servant,

GENERAL GAGE.

G. WASHINGTON.

A Copy of General Lee's letter declining the interview proposed by General Burgoyne. Cambridge, (Head Quarters,) July 11, 1775.

General Lee's Compliments to General Burgoyne.—Would be extremely happy in the interview he so kindly proposed. But as he perceives that General Burgoyne has already made up his mind on this great subject; and as it is impossible that he (Gen. Lee) should ever alter his opinion, he is apprehensive that the interview might create those Jealousies and Suspicions, so natural to a people struggling in the dearest of all causes, that of their Liberty, Property, Wives, Children, and their future Generations. He must therefore defer the happiness of embracing a man whom he most sincerely loves, until the subversion of the present tyrannical ministry and system, which he is persuaded must be in a few months, as he knows Great-Britain cannot stand the contest. He begs General Burgoyne will send the letters which his Aid-de-Camp has for him. If Gardner is his Aid-de-Camp, he desires his love to him.

Anecdote of General Putnam.

During the late war, when Gen. Amherst was marching across the country of Canada, the Army coming to one of the lakes, which they were obliged to pass, found the French had a vessel of 12 guns upon it. He was in great distress; his boats were no match for her; and she alone was capable of sinking his whole army in that situation. While he was pondering what to be done, Putnam came up to him, and said, "General, that ship must be taken." "Aye!" says Amherst, "I would give the world if she was taken." "I'll take her," says Putnam. Amherst smiled, and asked how? "Give me some wedges, a beetle (a large wooden hammer or maul used for driving wedges,) and a few men of my own choice." Amherst could not conceive how an armed vessel was to be taken by four or five men, a beetle and wedges. However, he granted Putnam's request. When night came, Putnam, with his materials and men, went in a boat under the vessel's stern, and in an instant drove in the wedges behind the rudder, in the little cavity between the rudder and ship, and left her. In the morning, the sails were seen fluttering about; she was adrift in the middle of the lake; and being presently blown ashore, she was easily taken.

An Officer in Boston writes thus to his Father in London.

"Why should I complain of hard fate; Gen. Gage and all his family have for this, month past lived upon salt provisions. Last Saturday Gen. Putnam in the true style of military complaisance, which abolishes all personal resentment, and smooths the horrors of war when discipline will permit, sent a present to the General's Lady, of a fine fresh quarter of veal, which was very acceptable, and received the return of a very polite card of thanks."

The Enemies to Liberty and America, headed by Thomas Gage, lately gave a noble specimen of their hatred to the very name of Liberty. A Party of them, of whom one Job Williams was Ringleader, a few days since repaired to a tree at the south end of Boston, known by the name of Liberty-Tree, and armed with axes, &c., made a furious attack upon it.

After a long spell of laughing and grinning, sweating, swearing, and foaming, with malice diabolical, they cut down a tree, because it bore the name of Liberty. But be it known to this infamous band of Traitors that the GRAND AMERICAN TREE OF LIBERTY, planted in the centre of the United Colonies of North America, now flourishes with unrivalled, increasing beauty, and bids fair in a short time, to afford, under its wide spreading branches, a safe and happy retreat for all the sons of Liberty, however numerous and dispersed.

This once hated ground is now covered by a splendid block of stores, (which is nearly opposite Beyston Market,) erected by the Hon. D. Sears, of this city.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1796.

Friends and Fellow Citizens :

The period for a new election of a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom the choice is to be made.

I beg you at the same time to do me the justice to be assured, that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country; and that in withdrawing the tender of service, which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest; no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness; but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of, and continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me, have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty, and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to turn to that retirement from which I have been reluctantly drawn. The strength of my inclination to do this, previous to the last election, had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you; but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of affairs with foreign nations, and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence, impelled me to abandon the idea. I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty or propriety; and am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that in the present circumstances of our country, you will not disapprove of my determination to retire.

The impressions with which I first undertook the arduous trust, were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust, I will only say that I have, with good intentions, contributed towards the organization and administration of the government the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious in the outset, of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience in my own eyes, perhaps still more in the eyes of others, has strengthened the motives to diffidence of myself; and, every day, the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more, that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome. Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services, they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe, that while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it.

In looking forward to the moment which is to terminate the career of my political life, my feelings do not permit me to suspend the deep acknowledgement of that debt of gratitude which I owe to my beloved country for the many honors it has conferred upon me; still more for the steadfast confidence with which it has supported me; and for the opportunities I have thence enjoyed of manifesting my inviolable attachment, by services faithful and persevering, though in usefulness unequal to my zeal. If benefits have resulted to our country from these services, let it always be remembered to your praise, and as an instructive example in our annals, that under circumstances in which the passions, agitated in every direction, were liable to mislead—amidst appearances sometimes dubious—vicissitudes of fortune often discouraging—in situations in which not unfrequently want of success has countenanced the spirit of criticism—the constancy of your support was the essential prop of the efforts, and a guarantee of the plans, by which they were effected. Profoundly penetrated with this idea, I shall carry it with me to my grave, as a strong incitement to unceasing wishes, that Heaven may continue to you the choicest tokens of its beneficence—that your union and brotherly affection may be perpetual—that the free constitution which is the work of your hands may be sacredly maintained—that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue—that, in fine, the happiness of the people of these states, under the auspices of liberty, may be made complete, by so careful a preservation, and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory of recommending it to the applause, the affection, and adoption of every nation which is a stranger to it.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop. But a solicitude for your welfare, which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger, natural to that solicitude, urge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer to your solemn contemplation, and to recommend to your frequent review, some sentiments, which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all-important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be offered to you with the more freedom, as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motives to bias his counsel. Nor can I forget, as an encouragement to it, your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of our hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

The unity of government, which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you. It is justly so; for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence; the support of your tranquility at home; your peace abroad; of your safety; of your prosperity; of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee, that from different causes and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed; it is of infinite moment, that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual, immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and to speak of it as a palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens, by birth or choice, of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of AMERICAN, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism, more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of difference you have the same religion, manners, habits, and political principle. You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together; the independence and liberty you possess, are the work of joint councils and joint efforts—of common dangers, sufferings, and success.

But these considerations, however powerfully they address themselves to your sensibility, are greatly outweighed by those which apply more immediately to your interest. Here every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the union of the whole.

The north, in an unrestrained intercourse with the south, protected by the equal laws of a common government, finds in the productions of the latter, great additional resources of maritime and commercial enterprise, and precious materials of manufacturing industry. The south, in the same intercourse, benefitting by the same agency of the north, sees its agriculture grow and its commerce expand. Turning partly into its own channels the seamen of the north, it finds its particular navigation invigorated—and while it contributes in different ways to nourish and increase the general mass of the national navigation, it looks forward to the protection of a maritime strength, to which itself is unequally adapted. The east, in like intercourse with the west, already finds in the progressive improvement of interior communications by land and water, will more and more find a valuable vent for the commodities which it brings from abroad, or manufactures at home. The west derives from the east supplies requisite to its growth and comfort—and what is perhaps of still greater consequence, it must of necessity owe the secure enjoyment of indispensable outlets for its own productions, to the weight, influence, and the future maritime strength of the Atlantic side of the Union, directed by an indissoluble community of interest as one nation. Any other tenure by which the west can hold this essential advantage, whether derived from its own separate strength, or from an apostate and unnatural connection with any foreign power, must be intrinsically precarious.

While, then, every part of our country thus feels an immediate and particular interest in union, all the parts combined cannot fail to find in the united mass of means and efforts, greater strength, greater resource, proportionably, greater security from external danger, a less frequent interruption of their peace by foreign nations; and what is of inestimable value, they must derive from union an exemption from those broils and wars between themselves, which so frequently afflict neighboring countries, not tied together by the same government, which their own rivalships alone would be sufficient to produce; but which opposite foreign alliances, attachments, and intrigues, would stimulate and embitter. Hence likewise, they will avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments, which under any form of government are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty. In this sense it is, that your union ought to be considered as a main prop of your liberty, and that the love of the one ought to endear to you the preservation of the other.

These considerations speak a persuasive language to every reflecting and virtuous mind, and exhibit the continuance of the union as a primary object of patriotic desire. Is there a doubt whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere? Let experience solve it. To listen to mere speculation in such a case were criminal. We are authorized to hope that a proper organization of the whole, with the auxiliary agency of governments for the respective subdivisions, will afford a happy issue of the experiment. It is well worth a fair and full experiment. With such powerful and obvious motives to union, affecting all parts of our country, while experience shall not have demonstrated its impracticability, there will always be reason to distrust the patriotism of those who in any quarter may endeavor to weaken its bands.

In contemplating the causes which may disturb our union, it occurs as matter of serious concern that any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties, by geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern; Atlantic and Western; whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. One of the expedients of party to acquire influence within particular districts, is to represent the opinions and aims of other districts. You cannot shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heart-burnings which spring from these misrepresentations; they tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection. The inhabitants of our western country have lately had a useful lesson on this head. They have seen in the negotiation by the executive, and in the unanimous ratification by the Senate of the treaty with Spain, and in the universal satisfaction at that event throughout the United States, a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicions propagated among them of a policy in the general government, and in the Atlantic states, unfriendly to their interests in regard to the Mississippi. They have been witnesses to the formation of two treaties, that with Great Britain, and that with Spain, which secure to them every thing they could desire, in respect to our foreign relations, towards confirming their prosperity. Will it not be their wisdom to rely for the preservation of these advantages on the union by which they were procured? Will they not henceforth be deaf to those advisers, if such they are, who would sever them from their brethren, and connect them with aliens?

To the efficacy and permanency of your union, a government for the whole is indispensable. No alliances, however strict between the parts, can be an adequate substitute; they must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which alliances at all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay, by the adoption of a constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate union, and for the efficacious management of your common concerns. This government, the offspring of your own choice, uninfluenced and unawed; adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation; completely free in its principles; in the distribution of its powers uniting security with energy, and containing within itself provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberations and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction; to give it an artificial and extraordinary force; to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of party, often a small, but artful and enterprising minority of the community; and according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans, digested by common counsels and modified by mutual interests.

However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely, in the course of time and things, to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government; destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion.

Towards the preservation of your government, and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite not only that you steadily discountenance irregular opposition to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretext. One method of assault may be to effect in the forms of the constitution alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown. In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments, as of other human institutions; that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitutions of a country; that facility in changes, upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion; and remember especially, that from the efficient management of your common interests, in a country so extensive as ours, a government of as much vigor as is consistent with the perfect security of liberty, is indispensable. Liberty itself will find in such a government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian. It is, indeed, little else than a name, where the government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in the secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property.

I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them upon geographical discriminations. Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you, in the most solemn manner, against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally.

This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments, more or less stifled, controlled, or repressed: but in those of the popular form it is seen in its greatest rankness, and is truly their worst enemy.

The alternate denomination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge, natural to party dissension, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result, gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; and, sooner or later, the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own elevation on the ruins of the public liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind, (which nevertheless ought not to be entirely out of sight,) the common and continual mischief of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

It serves always to distract the public councils, and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another; foment occasional riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which finds a facilitated access to the government itself, through the channels of party passion. Thus the policy and will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government; and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This, within certain limits, is probably true; and in governments of a monarchical cast, patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favor, upon the spirit of party. But in those of popular character, in governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged. From the natural tendency, it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose; and there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it. A fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming, it should consume.

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking, in a free country, should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres; avoiding, in the exercise of the powers of one department, to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the power of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it, which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions of the other, has been evinced by experiments, ancient and modern; some of them in our country, and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be, in any particular, wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way in which the constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance, in permanent evil, any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connection with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths, which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles.

It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?

Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.

As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it, is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering, also, that timely disbursements to prepare for danger, frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burdens which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives; but it is necessary that public opinion should co-operate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment, inseparable from the selection of the proper objects, (which is always a choice of difficulties,) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures for obtaining revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate.

Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all; religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt but that in the course of time and things the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! it is rendered impossible by its vices!

In the execution of such a plan, nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations, and passionate attachment for others, should be excluded; and that in the place of them, just and amicable feelings towards all should be cultivated. The nation which indulges towards another an habitual hatred, or an habitual fondness, is, in some degree, a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest. Antipathy in one nation against another, disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.

Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed, and bloody contests. The nation, prompted by ill will and resentment, sometimes impels to war the government, contrary to the best calculations of policy. The government sometimes participates in the national propensity, and adopts through passion what reason would reject; at other times it makes the animosity of the nation subservient to the projects of hostility, instigated by pride, ambition, and other sinister and pernicious motives. The peace often, sometimes, perhaps, the liberty of nations has been the victim.

So, likewise, a passionate attachment of one nation for another produces a variety of evils. Sympathy for the favorite nations, facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and the wars of the latter, without adequate inducements or justification. It leads, also, to concessions to the favorite nation of privileges denied to others, which are apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions, by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained, and by exciting jealousy, ill will and a disposition to retaliate in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupt, or deluded citizens, (who devote themselves to the favorite nation,) facility to betray or sacrifice the interests of their own country without odium, sometimes even with popularity; gliding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation to a commendable deference for public opinion, or a laudable zeal for public good, the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption, or infatuation.

As avenues to foreign influence, in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot. How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practise the art of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak, towards a great and powerful nation, dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter. Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to, to be useful, must be impartial, else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defence against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike for another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious; while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence, she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitude of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion, it is unnecessary, and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

Harmony, and a liberal intercourse with all nations, are recommended by policy, humanity, and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand; neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences; consulting the natural course of things; diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the stream of commerce, but forcing nothing; establishing with powers so disposed, in order to give trade a stable course, to define the rights of our merchants, and to enable the government to support them, conventional rules of intercourse, the best that present circumstances and natural opinion will permit, but temporary and liable to be, from time to time, abandoned or varied, as experience and circumstances shall dictate; constantly keeping in view that it is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another; that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character; that by such acceptance, it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favors, and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old affectionate friend, I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish—that they will control the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of nations. But if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit, some occasional good; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit; to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigue; to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism; this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

How far in the discharge of my official duties I have been guided by the principles which have been delineated, the public records and other evidences of my conduct must witness to you and the world. To myself, the assurance of my own conscience is, that I have at least believed myself to be guided by them.

In relation to the still subsisting war in Europe, my proclamation of the 22d of April, 1793, is the index to my plan. Sanctioned by your approving voice, and by that of your representatives in both houses of Congress, the spirit of that measure has continually governed me, uninfluenced by any attempts to deter or divert me from it.

After deliberate examination, with the aids of the best lights I could obtain, I was well satisfied that our country, under all the circumstances of the case, had a right to take, and was bound in duty and interest to take, a neutral position. Having taken it, I determined, as far as should depend upon me, to maintain it with moderation, perseverance and firmness.

The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct, it is not necessary on this occasion to detail. I will only observe, that according to my understanding of the matter, that right, so far from being denied by any of the belligerent powers, has been virtually admitted by all.

The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without anything more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every nation, in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of peace and amity towards other nations.

The inducements of interest for observing that conduct, will best be referred to your own reflections and experience. With me, a predominant motive has been to endeavor to gain time to our country, to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress, without interruption, to that degree of strength and constancy, which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortune.

Though in reviewing the incidents of my administration, I am unconscious of intentional error; I am nevertheless too sensible of my defects not to think it probable that I may have committed many errors. Whatever they may be, I fervently beseech the Almighty to avert or mitigate the evils to which they may tend. I shall also carry with me the hope that my country will never cease to view them with indulgence; and that, after forty-five years of my life dedicated to its service, with an upright zeal, the faults of incompetent abilities will be consigned to oblivion, as myself must soon be to the mansions of rest.

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love towards it, which is so natural to a man who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for several generations; I anticipate, with pleasing expectation, that retreat, in which I promise myself to realize without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking in the midst of my fellow-citizens, the benign influence of good laws, under a free government; the ever favorite object of my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labors and dangers.

COMPACT MADE ON BOARD THE MAY-FLOWER,

NOVEMBER 11, 1620.

In the name of God, amen. We whose names are under written, the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign Lord, King James, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. Having undertaken for the glory of God, and advancement of the Christian faith, and the honor of our King and country, a voyage to plant the first colony in the northern parts of Virginia; do by these presents solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God and one another, covenant, and combine ourselves together into a civil body politick, for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue hereof do enact constitute and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions and officers, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the colony; into which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names, at Cape Cod, the eleventh of November, in the reign of our sovereign Lord, King James, of England France and Ireland, the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth, Anno. Dom. 1620.

PRESENTATION OF A HAT AND STAFF TO MYRON LAWRENCE

Some thirty years ago, the following described customs were observed by the members of the Legislature. The new members of the Senate, as a memorial of respect, to the oldest member, presented him with some mark of esteem — as a cane, a hat, a snuff-box, or clock. The members of the House, who saw him for the first time, invited the older members of their respective counties, to a supper at their charge. This latter custom was observed with great strictness, until the Temperance Reformation, when it was discontinued. The other, so far as is known, fell with it. It has been revived under peculiarly auspicious circumstances, and so celebrated as to form an easy and becoming precedent for future observance.

The presentation of a "Hat and Staff," by the youngest to the oldest member of the Senate, took place in the Senate Chamber, January 22, 1852, immediately after the adjournment, Mr. Brinley of Boston, being in the chair.

The hat was manufactured by Mr. Stone, of Court street, and the cane, which is of Malacca, mounted with agate and gold, by Henry Prentiss of the same street.

Mr BURLINGAME prefaced the presentation with the following remarks ; and that the full force of them may be understood, we will state that Mr. LAWRENCE, the recipient, is the largest man in the Commonwealth, weighing 345 pounds :

SIR, in obedience to an old custom, and on behalf of the younger members of the Senate, I shall have the pleasure, after a few words, of presenting you, the senior member of this body, with this hat and this staff, not only as tokens of our esteem, but as symbols of that protection and support which are due from youth to age, especially when that age, as in this instance, is crowned with civic honors.

Sir, we are not unmindful of your private virtue and your public service. We congratulate you that the cares of State have consisted so well with your health and happiness, and that those sorrows, which have come to you, as they come to all men, have not left their saddening influence upon your genial nature. When we look upon your broad breast and expansive brow, and consider the vital energy of the one and the intellectual strength of the other, we cannot wonder at the wit and the wisdom with which you have enlivened and enlightened the previous deliberations of this body. Sir, many an antique gem has resparkled in the light of your genius ; many a strong man has gone down before the ponderous weight of your arguments.

Your partial friends have styled you the Sheridan of your party ; they have done you injustice, for Sheridan, it is said, prepared his wit. The light of yours comes not from the lamp. Its quality attests its spontaneity, and what it lacks in finish it makes up in force. But I need not dwell upon qualities or criticise characteristics. Nor need I in this presence refer to your professional or political triumphs. They illuminate the records of our courts, and are written down as with a pen of iron, in the rock of our State's history.

The people of Hampshire who have long reposed in the shadow of your influence, have returned you many times to the House, and again and again to the Senate, over whose councils you have been called upon to preside, and I think I may say, without disparaging the illustrious men who have filled that chair, and without disrespect to the gentleman who temporarily occupies it [Mr. BRAINLEY] or to the gentleman who permanently fills it [Mr. WILSON] with so much credit to himself and satisfaction to the Senate, I may say that it was never in all respects so completely filled as when occupied by yourself.

As a legislator, you have looked to the welfare of the people, and while you have had due regard to individual interests, you have done more perhaps than any other man in the Commonwealth to illustrate the benefit of large corporations.

For the great cause of human liberty you have offered your right arm to paralysis; and you have ever been ready, I have no doubt to respond to the mandatory part of the great Writ of Right in the very words of its title, Habeas Corpus.

Sir, you have given form to the idea but faintly expressed by the words "Great and General Court of Massachusetts." You have illustrated the stature a man may reach, and the spheroidal development he may attain in this free land under the inspiration of fair opportunity. And you have also illustrated the historical fact so creditable to the State, that "Man is the noblest growth our soil supplies."

Beyond the limits of our State, in the wide realm of politics, your policy has kept pace with the expanding power of the republic. Indeed, you have shone in the political heavens, not like a meteor which dazzles but to delude, but like a fixed star of the first magnitude. The great dramatist has said that some men are born great, and that others have greatness thrust upon them. You are not indebted for your greatness to any adventitious circumstance of birth, or to any undue efforts on the part of friends to place upon your Atlantean shoulders unmerited honors. No, your greatness is your own. It is the result of slow growth. And it is a greatness which, if taken away, would not enrich another, but make you poor indeed. The other day when I had the honor to call you pater senatus, you responded that you were, not only in views, but in discipline. Sir, as obedient children we shall hear your views with great respect, considering their paternity, and take with humility the discipline you may deem necessary to their enforcement, feeling that it will be imparted for our good, and in accordance with the wisdom of Solomon — that wisdom mellowed by time, and softened still more by the paternal tenderness of your own warm heart. Time was when a gulf stood between youth and age; when friendships depended more upon years than upon yearnings. You have done much to fill up that gulf, and by your social qualities to bring on that "good time coming," when as it is said, we may seek our affinities without regard to sex, age or condition. It is thought by some that age not only extinguishes the fires of hope, but that it dries up the deep fountains of human sympathy. This is not so. I have found in my experience, as pure, as warm, as kind feelings, in a heart whose throbbings had toiled past the noon of life, as in the ardent and tumultuous breast of youth. Sir, youth and age should go hand in hand together. The wisdom and experience of the one instructing and directing the enthusiasm of the other. You stand upon the very keystone of the arch of life; enjoying the full confidence of your fellow citizens and with the prospect of still further enlarging your sphere of action. Sir, when your honors come thick upon you, sometimes remember your children of the Senate, especially in your patriarchal dispensations.

And now, I present you with this staff, with the assurance that you may lean upon it, and find support. And with this hat [Mr. B. here took the articles from the table, and looking at the hat remarked,

"It's odd how hats expand their brims
As youth begins to fade;
As if when life had reached its noon,
It wanted them for shade."]

This hat continued Mr. BURLINGAME, we feel will cover more of manhood than can any where else be found; and we believe it is a gift which will be felt by you in your crowning hours, and whenever the memory of this occasion shall come brimming up.

And now, Sir, having performed a most delightful duty we wait your paternal advice.

At the conclusion of Mr. BURLINGAME's remarks, Mr. LAWRENCE, amid shouts of laughter, responded as follows:—

My Sons:—Your filial offerings are accepted, with gratitude, and will be kept and carefully used as memorials of this pleasant occasion, and of the relationship between us hereby recognized. As patriarch of these promising young men, it will afford me great pleasure to witness your advancement in legislative knowledge, and your improvement in the difficult science of statesmanship. I shall reckon it among my pleasantest duties to watch your progress with paternal care, to admonish you with paternal kindness, and if need be administer reproof and chastisement with paternal fidelity. It is the right of the well stricken in years, to admonish and advise the young. The old man, having sailed far down the river of life, carefully noting its sinuosities, its shoals and sunken reefs, its whirlpools and eddies, its rapids and cataracts, is competent to instruct the inexperienced voyager, and qualified to assume the functions and authority of a pilot. In youth and early manhood the horizon is free from clouds, the visions of hope are all beautiful and enchanted and daguerreotyped with a strong light. But disappointment is the lot of man. It is eminently the portion of him who reasons from false principles, who believes without sufficient evidence, who hopes against hope, and follows every fitting chimera of a distempered brain as a veritable reality.

Allow me, my sons, in my patriarchal character, to give you, in all sincerity and frankness, certain practical advice as to your legislative course and duties. Be ever in your seat during the sessions of the board, give undivided attention to the business in progress, endeavor to understand the merits and provisions of every bill acted on, and never dodge a vote. As individual Senators, let honor be your polar star, honesty of purpose your sheet anchor, truth your compass, and the best good of the whole your supreme object, and the strong breeze of popularity will fill your sails, and carry you onward to the desired port.

In your intercourse with each other, be courteous and gentlemanly, and always respectful to superiors in age. The hoary head is the residence of wisdom, and is entitled to respect.

Cultivate equanimity of temper, restrain passion, suppress irritation, and bridle your tongues—"He that brideth his tongue, is greater than he that taketh a city."

In debate, regard the main points under discussion, avoid digressions, and let not your partiality for a particular provision or enactment beget a doggedness of purpose. If your opponent suggests an amendment, obviously improving the bill, accept it graciously, and in this manner you will conquer his prejudice and secure his aid.

Do not speak often. Young men frequently err in this respect. Whenever you ask the attention of the Senate, presume that your hearers know something, and do not weary and disgust them by dry and uninteresting minutia of detail. Never speak unless you have something to say, and always stop when you get through. Pursue these rules and you will be listened to by your fellows with marked respect and attention. Adopt the opposite course, and you will find the newspaper, or the pen, or the knife, will be put into immediate requisition. The most unwelcome labor I imagine, is to address empty seats, or a pre-occupied audience.

Hold your opinions strongly, and be ever ready to give a reason for your faith.

Inexperienced debaters are apt to judge a speech by its length and rhetorical ornaments rather than by the amount of thought and matter for reflection. This though a very common, is nevertheless a most fatal mistake. The short pithy, pointed, and well-aimed speech is the one that tells, while the elaborate, wire-drawn, lamp-smelling essay, profusely ornate with tropes and metaphors, is marvellously soporific in its influence. Cultivate, my sons, a plain straight forward, Websterian manner of style and address, and you cannot fail to become efficient and acceptable Senators. The habits you form here may continue through life. Concentrate, therefore your thoughts, condense your minds, form a manly and energetic style of address—let every word be fraught with meaning, and every sentence add to the intensity of the leading ideas.

My sons, you have commenced your Senatorial course under favorable auspices. Your elder bretheren, being accomplished legislators, will furnish examples worthy of imitation. During the session there will be grave subjects of debate and matters of serious enactment. Give your undivided attention to the business on hand, and if an important thought, or series of thoughts occur to you, which have escaped former debates, "screw your courage up to the sticking-point, and break the ice," and give the Senate the benefit of your thoughts. No man knows what he can do, until he has been put to the test. Don't grieve the spirit of eloquence stirring within you, but cherish it, encourage it, nurse it, until the seed shall have germinated, the bud expanded and the fruit be ripened into perfection.

Consider well, the path of duty. Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth an unsavory odor, so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honor. In your exalted station all eyes are upon you. An impartial public is ready to award you honor or dishonor according as your deeds shall be. Partial friends are watching you with yearning hearts, deeply sympathising in your welfare.— Wives and children are looking to some of you with an intensity of hope and love, and with a confident expectation, that you will discharge your whole duty, that no words can express. Do not give to party what is meant for mankind. When occasion calls, rise superior to party interest, to party discipline, and to party dictation.— Be men, be patriots, be christians, be conscientious legislators. On occasions like these, let the higher law, an enlightened conscience, proudly triumph over party arrangements, and merge the partizan in the patriot. And, when your heads shall be silvered o'er with age, and the sunny faced boy you now dandle on your knees shall worthily occupy your place, a retrospect of the past will present no cause for repentance and reminiscences of this day and of this occasion, of this Patriarch and these elder brethren, and these now consecrated noviciates, will sweetly cluster in your memories, and stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance.

My sons, my patriarchal blessing rest on you. Remember that the man who is diligent in his business shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mere men. And may the blessing of Heaven crown your life with happiness and lead you into the way of all truth and all duty, now and forever.

[At the conclusion of Mr. LAWRENCE's remarks, the Senate adjourned.]

EULOGY ON DANIEL WEBSTER,

BY HON. GEORGE S. HILLARD.

It is now twenty-six years since the heart of the nation was so deeply moved by the death of two great founders of the Republic, on the fiftieth anniversary of the day when its independence was declared. Then for the first time, these consecrated walls wore the weeds of mourning. Then the multitude that filled this hall were addressed by a man, whose thoughts rose without effort to the height of his great theme. He seemed inspired by the occasion, and he looked and spoke like one on whom the mantle of some ascended prophet had at that moment fallen. He lifted up and bore aloft his audience on the wings of his mighty eloquence. His words fell upon his hearers with irresistible, subduing power, and their hearts poured themselves forth in one deep and strong tide of patriotic and reverential feeling.

And now he, that was then so full of life and power, has gone to join the patriots whom he commemorated. Webster is no more than Adams and Jefferson. The people, that then came to listen to him, are now here to mourn for him. His voice of wisdom and eloquence is silent. The arm on which a nation leaned is stark and cold. That heroic form is given back to the dust. We, that delighted to honor him in life, are now here to honor him in death. One circle of duties is ended and another is begun. We can no longer give him our confidence, our support, our suffrages; but memory and gratitude are still left to us. As he has not lived for himself alone, so he has not died for himself alone. The services of his life are crowned and sealed with the benediction of his death. So long as a man remains upon earth, his life is a fragment. It is exposed to chance and change, to the shocks of fate and the assaults of trial. But the end crowns the work. A career that is closed becomes a firm possession and a completed power. The arch is imperfect till the hand of death has fixed the keystone.

The custom of honoring great public benefactors by these solemn observances is natural, just, and wise. But the tributes and testimonials which we offer to departed worth, are for the living, and not for the dead. Eulogies, monuments, and statues can add nothing to the peace and joy of that serene sphere, into which the great and good, who have finished their earthly career, have passed. But these expressions and memorials do good to those from whom they flow. They lift us above the region of low cares and selfish struggles. They link the present to the past, and the world of sense to the world of thought. They break the common course of life with feelings brought from a higher region. Who can measure the effect of a scene like this,—these mourning walls, these saddened faces, those solemn strains of music? The seed of a deep emotion here planted, may ripen into the fruit of noble action.

A great man is a gift, in some measure, a revelation of God. A great man, living for high ends, is the divinest thing that can be seen on earth. The value and interest of history are derived chiefly from the lives and services of the eminent men whom it commemorates. Indeed, without these, there would be no such thing as history, and the progress of a nation would be as little worth recording, as the march of a trading caravan across a desert. The death of Mr. Webster is too recent, and he was taken away too suddenly from a sphere of wide and great influence, for the calm verdict of history to be passed upon him, and an accurate gauge to be taken of his works and his claims. But all men, whatever may have been the countenance they turned towards him in life, now feel that he was a man of the highest order of greatness, and that whatever of power, faculty, and knowledge there was in him, was given freely, heartily, and faithfully during a long course of years, to the service of his country. He, who in the judgment of all, was a great man and a great patriot, not only deserves these honors at our hands, but it would be disgraceful in us to withhold them. We, among whom he lived, who felt the power of his magnificent presence,—his brow, his eye, his voice, his bearing,—can never put him anywhere but in the front rank of the great men of all time. In running along the line of statesmen and orators, we light upon the name of no one to whom we are willing to admit his inferiority.

The theory that a great man is merely the product of his age, is rejected by the common sense and common observation of mankind. The power that guides large masses of men, and shapes the channels in which the energies of a great people flow, is something more than a mere aggregate of derivative forces. It is a compound product, in which the genius of the man is one element, and the sphere opened to him by the character of his age and the institutions of his country is another. In the case of Mr. Webster, we have a full co-operation of these two elements. Not only did he find opportunities for his great powers, but the events of his life, and the discipline through which he passed, were well fitted to train him up to that commanding intellectual stature, and perfect intellectual symmetry, which have made him so admirable, so eminent, and so useful a person.

He was fortunate in the accident, or rather the providence, of his birth. His father was a man of uncommon strength of mind and worth of character, who had seryed his country faithfully in trying times, and earned, in a high degree, the respect and confidence of his neighbors—a man of a large and loving heart, whose efforts and sacrifices for his children were repaid by them with most affectionate veneration. The energy and good sense of his mother exerted a strong influence upon the minds and characters of her children. He was born to the discipline of poverty; but a poverty such as braces and stimulates, not such as crushes and paralyzes. The region in which his boyhood was passed was new and wild, books were not easy to be had, schools were only an occasional privilege, and intercourse with the more settled parts of the country was difficult and rare. But this scarcity of mental food and mental excitement had its advantages, and his training was good, however imperfect his teaching might have been. His labors upon the farm helped to form that vigorous constitution which enabled him to sustain the immense pressure of cares and duties laid upon him in after years. Such books as he could procure were read with the whole heart and the whole mind. The conversation of a household, presided over by a strong-minded father, and a sensible, loving mother, helped to train the faculties of the younger members of the family. Nor were their winter evenings wanting in topics which had a fresher interest than any which books could furnish. There were stirring tales of the revolutionary struggle, and the old French war, in both of which his father had taken a part, with moving traditions of the hardships and perils of border life, and harrowing narratives of Indian captivity, all of which sunk deep into the heart of the impressible boy. The ample page of nature was ever before his eyes, not beautiful or picturesque, but stern, wild, and solitary, covered with a primeval forest, in winter, swept over by tremendous storms, but in summer, putting on a short-lived grace, and in autumn, glowing with an imperial pomp of coloring. In the deep, lonely woods, by the rushing streams, under the frosty stars of winter, the musing boy gathered food for his growing mind. There, to him, the mighty mother unveiled her awful face, and there, we may be sure, that the dauntless child stretched forth his hands and smiled. We feel a pensive pleasure in calling up the image of this slender, dark-browed, bright-eyed youth, going forth in the morning of life to sow the seed of future years. A loving brother, and a loving and dutiful son, he is cheerful under privation, and patient under restraint. Whatever work he finds to do, whether with the brain or the hand, he does it with all his might. He opens his mind to every ray of knowledge that breaks in upon him. Every step is a progress, and every blow removes an obstacle. Onward, ever onward, he moves; borne "against the wind, against the tide," by an impulse self-derived and self-sustained. He makes friends, awakens interest, inspires hopes. Thus, with these good angels about him, he passes from boyhood to youth, and from youth to early manhood. The school and the college have given him what they had to give; and excellent professional training has been secured; and now, with a vigorous frame, and a spirit patient of labor, with manly self-reliance, and a heart glowing with generous ambition and warm affections, the man, Daniel Webster, steps forth into the arena of life.

From this point his progress follows a natural law of growth, and every advance is justified and explained by what had gone before. For everything that he gains he has a perfect title to show. He is borne on by no fortunate accidents. The increase of his influence keeps no more than pace with the growth of his mind, and the development of his character. He is diligent in his calling, and faithful to the interests intrusted to his charge. His professional bearing is manly and elevated. He has the confidence of the court, and the ear of the jury, and has fairly earned them both. His business increases, his reputation is extended, and he becomes a marked man. He is not only equal to every occasion, but he always leaves the impression of having power in reserve, and of being capable of still greater efforts. What he does is judicious, and what he says is wise. He is not obliged to retrace his steps or qualify his statements. He blends the dignity and self-command of mature life with the ardor and energy of youth. To such a man, in our country, public life becomes a sort of necessity. A brief service in Congress wins for him the respect and admiration of the leading men of the whole Union, who see, with astonishment, in a young New Hampshire lawyer, the large views of a ripe statesman, and a generous and comprehensive tone of discussion, free alike from party bias and sectional narrowness. A removal to the metropolis of New England brings increase of professional opportunity, and in a few years he stands at the head of the Bar of the whole country. Public life is again thrust upon him, and, at one stride, he moves to the foremost rank of influence and consideration. His prodigious powers of argument and eloquence, freely given to an administration opposed to him in politics, crush a dangerous political heresy, and kindle a deeper national sentiment. The whole land rings with his name and praise, and foreign nations take up and prolong the sound. Every year brings higher trusts, weightier responsibilities, wider influence, until his country reposes in the shadow of his wisdom, and the power that proceeds from his mind and character becomes one of the controlling forces in the movements and relations of the civilized world.

To trace, step by step, the incidents of such a career, would far transcend the limits of a discourse like this, and of all places, it is least needed here. Judging of him by what he was, as well as by what he did, and analyzing the aggregate of his powers, we observe that his life moves in three distinct paths of greatness. He was a great lawyer, a great statesman, and a great writer. The gifts and training, which make a man eminent in any one of these departments, are by no means identical with those which make him eminent in any other. Very few have attained high rank in any two; and the distinction which Mr. Webster reached in all the three is almost without a parallel in history.

He was, from the beginning, more or less occupied with public affairs, and he continued to the last to be a practising lawyer; but, as regards these two spheres of action, his life may be divided into two distinct portions. From his twenty-third to his forty-first year, the practise of the law was his primary occupation and interest, but from the latter period to his death, it was secondary to his labors as a legislator and statesman. Of his eminence in the law—meaning the law as administered in the ordinary tribunals of the country, without reference, for the present, to constitutional questions—there is but one opinion among competent judges. Some may have excelled him in a single faculty or accomplishment, but in the combination of qualities which the law requires, no man of his time was on the whole equal to him. He was a safe counsellor and a powerful advocate; thorough in the preparation of causes and judicious in the management of them; quick, farseeing, cautious, and bold. His addresses to the jury were simple, manly, and direct; presenting the strong points of the case in a strong way, appealing to the reason and the conscience, and not to passions and prejudices; and never weakened by overstatement. He laid his own mind fairly along-side of that of the jury, and won their confidence by his sincere way of dealing with them. He had the wisdom to cease speaking when he came to an end. His most conspicuous power was his clearness of statement. He threw upon every subject a light like that of the sun at noonday. His mind, by an unerring instinct, separated the important from the unimportant facts in a complicated case, and so presented the former, that he was really making a powerful and persuasive argument, when he seemed to be only telling a plain story in a plain way. The transparency of the stream veiled its depth; and its depth concealed its rapid flow. His legal learning was accurate and perfectly at command, and he had made himself master of some difficult branches of law, such as special pleading and the law of real property, but the memory of some of his contemporaries was more richly stored with cases. From his remarkable powers of generalization, his elementary reading had filled his mind with principles, and he examined the questions that arose, by the light of these principles, and then sought in the books for cases to confirm the views which he had reached by reflection. He never resorted to stratagems and surprises, nor did he let his zeal for his client run away with his self-respect. His judgment was so clear, and his moral sense so strong, that he never could help discriminating between a good cause and a bad one; nor betraying to a close observer when he was arguing against what was his own judgment of his case. His manner was admirable, especially for its repose, an effective quality in an advocate, from the consciousness of strength which it implies. The uniform respect with which he treated the bench should not be omitted, in summing up his merits as a lawyer.

The exclusive practice of the law is not held to be the best preparation for public life. Not only does it invigorate without expanding—not only does it narrow at the same time that it sharpens—but the custom of addressing juries begets a habit of overstatement, which is a great defect in a public speaker, and the mind, that is constantly occupied in looking at one side of a disputed question, is apt to forget that it has two. Great minds triumph over these influences, but it is because they never fail, sooner or later, to overleap the formal barriers of the law. Had Mr. Webster been born in England, and educated to the bar, his powers could never have been confined to Westminster Hall. He would have been taken up and borne into parliament by an irresistible tide of public opinion. Born where he was, it would have been the greatest of misfortunes, if he had narrowed his mind and given up to his clients the genius that was meant for the whole country and all time. Admirably as he put a case to the jury, or argued it to the court, it was impossible not to feel that in many instances an inferior person would have done it nearly or quite as well; and sometimes the disproportion between the man and the work was so great, that it reminded one of the task given to Michael Angelo, to make a statue of snow.

His advancing reputation, however, soon led him into a class of cases, the peculiar growth of the institutions of his country, and admirably fitted to train a lawyer for public life, because, though legal in their form, they involve great questions of politics and government. The system under which we live is, in many respects, without a precedent. Singularly complicated in its arrangements, embracing a general government of limited and delegated powers, organized by an interfusion of separate sovereignties, all with written constitutions to be interpreted and reconciled, the imperfection of human language and the strength of human passion, leaving a wide margin for warring opinions, it is obvious to any person of political experience, that many grave questions, both of construction, and conflicting jurisdiction, must arise, requiring wisdom and authority for their adjustment. Especially must this be the case in a country like ours, of such great extent, with such immense material resources, and inhabited by so enterprising and energetic a people. It was a fortunate, may we not say a providential circumstance, that the growth of the country begun to devolve upon the Supreme Court of the United States the consideration of this class of questions, just at the time when Mr. Webster, in his ripe manhood, was able to give them the benefit of his extraordinary powers of argument and analysis. Previous to the Dartmouth College case, in 1818, not many important constitutional questions had come before the court, and, since that time, the great lawyer, who then broke upon them with so astonishing a blaze of learning and logic, has exerted a commanding influence in shaping that system of constitutional law — almost a supplementary Constitution — which has contributed so much to our happiness and prosperity. Great as is our debt of gratitude to such judges as Marshall and Story, it is hardly less great to such a lawyer as Mr. Webster. None would have been more ready than these eminent magistrates, to acknowledge the assistance they had derived from his masterly arguments.

In the discussion of constitutional questions, the mind of this great man found a most congenial employment. Here, books, cases, and precedents are of comparatively little value. We must ascend to first principles, and be guided by the light of pure reason. Not only is a chain of logical deduction to be fashioned, but its links must first be forged. Geometry itself hardly leads the mind into a region of more abstract and essential truth. In these calm heights of speculation and analysis, the genius of Mr. Webster moved with natural and majestic sweep. Breaking away from precedents and details, and soaring above the flight of eloquence, it saw the forms of truth in the colorless light and tranquil air of reason. When we dream of intelligences higher than man, we imagine their faculties exercised in serene inquiries like these, — not spurred by ambition — not kindled by passion — roused by no motive but the love of truth, and seeking no reward but the possession of it.

The respect which has been paid to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States is one of the signs of hope for the future, which are not to be overlooked in our desponding moods. The visitor in Washington sees a few grave men, in an unpretending room, surrounded by none of the symbols of command. Some one of them, in a quiet voice, reads an opinion in which the conflicting rights of sovereign States are weighed and adjusted, and questions, such as have generally led to exhausting wars, are settled by the light of reason and justice. This judgment goes forth, backed by no armed force, but commended by the moral and intellectual authority of the tribunal which pronounces it. It falls upon the waves of controversy with reconciling, subduing power; and haughty sovereignties, as at the voice of some superior intelligence, put off the mood of conflict and defiance, and yield a graceful obedience to the calm decrees of central justice. There is more cause for national pride in the deference paid to the decisions of this august tribunal, than in all our material triumphs; and so long as our people are thus loyal to reason and submissive to law, it is a weakness to despair.

The Dartmouth College case, which has been already mentioned, may be briefly referred to again, since its forms an important era in Mr. Webster's life. His argument in that case stands out among his other arguments, as his speech in reply to Mr. Hayne, among his other speeches. No better argument has been spoken in the English tongue in the memory of any living man, nor is the child that is born to-day likely to live to hear a better. Its learning is ample, but not ostentatious; its logic irresistible; its eloquence vigorous and lofty. I have often heard my revered and beloved friend, Judge Story, speak with great animation of the effect he then produced upon the court. "For the first hour," said he, "we listened to him with perfect astonishment; for the second hour, with perfect delight; and for the third hour, with perfect conviction." It is not too much to say that he entered the court on that day a comparatively unknown name, and left it with no rival but Pinkney. All the words he spoke on that occasion have not been recorded. When he had exhausted the resources of learning and logic, his mind passed naturally and simply into a strain of feeling not common to the place. Old recollections and early associations came over him, and the vision of his youth rose up. The genius of the institution where he was nurtured seemed standing by his side in weeds of mourning, with a countenance of sorrow. With suffused eyes, and faltering voice, he broke into an unpremeditated strain of emotion, so strong and so deep, that all who heard him were borne along with it. Heart answered to heart as he spoke, and, when he ceased, the silence and the tears of the impassive Bench, as well as of the excited audience, were a tribute to the truth and power of the feeling by which he had been inspired.

With his election to Congress, from the city of Boston, in 1822, the great labors and triumphs of his life begin. From that time until his death, with an interval of about two years after leaving President Tyler's Cabinet, he was constantly in the public service, as Representative, Senator, or Secretary of State. In this period his biography is included in the history of his country. Without pausing to dwell upon details, and looking at his public life as a whole, let us examine its leading features and guiding principles, and inquire upon what grounds he enjoyed our confidence and admiration, while living, and is entitled to our gratitude when dead.

Public men, in popular governments, are divided into two great classes, statesmen and politicians. The difference between them is like the difference between the artist and the mechanic. The statesman starts with original principles, and is propelled by a self-derived impulse. The politician has his course to choose, and puts himself in a position to make the best use of the forces which lie outside of him. The statesman's genius sometimes fails in reaching its proper sphere, from the want of the politician's faculty; and, on the other hand, the politician's intellectual poverty is never fully apprehended till he has contrived to attain an elevation which belongs only to the statesman. The statesman is often called upon to oppose popular opinion, and never is his attitude nobler than when so doing; but the sagacity of the politician is shown in seeing, a little before the rest of the world, how the stream of popular feeling is about to turn, and so throwing himself upon it, as to seem to be guiding it, while he is only propelled by it. A statesman makes the occasion, but the occasion makes the politician.

Mr. Webster was pre-eminently a statesman. He rested his claims upon principles; and by these he was ready to stand or fall. In looking at the endowments which he brought to the service of his country, a prominent rank is to be assigned to that deep and penetrating wisdom which gave so safe a direction to his genius. His imagination, his passions, and his sympathies, were all kept in subordination to this sovereign power. He saw things as they are, neither magnified, nor discolored by prejudice or prepossession. He heard all sides, and did not insist that a thing was true, because he wished it to be true, or because it seemed probable to his first inquiry. His post of observation was the central and fixed light of reason, from which all wandering and uncertain elements were at last discerned in their just relations and proportions. The functions of government did not, in his view, lie in the region of speculation or emotion. It was "a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants." The ends of government are, indeed, ever identical, but the means used to attain them are various. The practical statesman must aim, not at the best conceivable, but the best attainable good. Thus, Mr. Webster always recognized and accepted the necessities of his position. He did not hope against hope, nor waste his energies in attempting the impossible. Living under a government, in which universal suffrage is the ultimate propelling force, he received the expressed sense of the people as a fact, and not an hypothesis. Like all men who are long in public life, under popular institutions, he incurred the reproach of inconsistency; a reproach not resting upon any change of principle—for he never changed his principles,—but upon the modification of measures and policy which every enlightened statesman yields to the inevitable march of events and innovations of time.

Nor was he less remarkable for the breadth and comprehensiveness of his views. He knew no North, no South, no East, no West. His great mind and patriotic heart embraced the whole land with all its interests and all its claims. He had nothing of partisan narrowness or sectional exclusiveness. His point of sight was high enough to take in all parts of the country, and his heart was large enough and warm enough to love it all, to cling to it, to live for it, or die for it. Nothing is more characteristic of greatness than this capacity of enlarged and generous affections. No public man ever earned more fully the title of a national, an American statesman. No heart ever beat with a higher national spirit than his. The honor of his country was as dear to him as the faces of his children. Where that was in question, his great powers blazed forth like a flame of fire in its defence. Never were his words more weighty, his logic more irresistible, his eloquence more lofty—never did his mind move with more majestic and victorious flight,—than when vindicating the rights of his country, or shielding her from unjust aspersions.

It is a hasty and mistaken judgment to gauge the merits of a statesman, under popular institutions, by the results which he brings about and the measures which he carries through. His opportunities in this respect will depend, generally, upon the fact whether he happens to be in the majority or the minority. How much would be taken from the greatness of one of the greatest of statesmen, Mr. Fox, if this test were applied to him. The merits of a statesman are to be measured by the good which he does, by the evil which he prevents, by the sentiments he breathes into the public heart, and the principles he diffuses through the public mind. Mr. Webster did not belong to that great political party which, under ordinary circumstances, and when no exceptional elements have been thrown in, have been able to command a majority in the whole nation, and upon which the responsibility of governing the country, has been consequently thrown. Thus, for the larger part of his public life, he was in the minority. But a minority is as important an element, in carrying on a representative government, as a majority; and he never transcended its legitimate functions. His opposition was open, manly, and conscientious, never factious, never importunate. He stated fairly the arguments to which he replied. He did not stoop to personality, or resort to the low and cheap trick of impugning the motives or characters of his opponents. He has therefore fairly earned the respect which the democratic party, to their honor be it spoken, have shown to his memory. He was a party man, to this extent—he believed that under a popular government, it was expedient that men of substantially the same way of thinking in politics should act together, in order to accomplish any general good, but he never gave up to his party what was meant for his country. When the turn of the tide threw upon him the initiative of measures, no man ever showed a wiser spirit of legislation or a more just and enlightened policy in statesmanship. He combined what Bacon calls the logical with the mathematical part of the mind. He could judge well of the mode of attaining any end, and estimate, at the same time, the true value of the end itself. His powers were by no means limited to attack and defence, but he had the organizing and constructing mind; which shapes and fits a course of policy to the wants and temper of a great people.

His influence, as a public man, extends over the last forty years, and, during that period, what is there that does not bear his impress? Go where we will, upon land or sea—from agriculture to commerce, and from commerce to manufactures—turn to domestic industry, to foreign relations, to law, education, and religion,—everywhere, we meet the image and superscription of this imperial mind. The Ashburton treaty may stand as a monument of the good he did. His speech in reply to Mr. Hayne may be cited as a proof of the evil he prevented; and, for this reason, while its whole effect can never be measured, its importance can hardly be over-stated. Probably no discourse ever spoken by man had a wider, more permanent, and more beneficial influence. Not only did it completely overthrow a most dangerous attack on the Constitution, but it made it impossible for the same attack ever to be renewed. From that day forward the specious front of nullification was branded with treason. If we estimate the claims of a public man by his influence upon the national heart, and his contributions to a high-toned national sentiment, who shall stand by the side of Mr. Webster? Where is the theory of constitutional liberty better expounded, and the rules and conditions of national well-being and well-doing better laid down, than in his speeches and writings? What books should we so soon put into the hands of an intelligent foreigner, who desired to learn the great doctrines of government and administration on which the power and progress of our country repose, and to measure the intellectual stature of a finished American man?

The relation which he held to the politics of the country was the natural result of a mind and temperament like his. A wise patriot, who understands the wants of his time, will throw himself into the scale which most needs the weight of his influence, and choose the side which is best for his country and not for himself. Hence, it may be his duty to espouse defeat and cleave to disappointment. In weighing the two elements of law and liberty, as they are mingled in our country, he felt that danger was rather to be apprehended from the preponderance of license than of authority; that men were attracted to liberty by the powerful instincts of the blood and heart, but to law by the colder and fainter suggestions of the reason. Hence, he was a conservative at home, and gave his influence to the party of permanence rather than progression. But in Europe it was different. There he saw that there were abuses to be reformed and burdens to be removed; that the principle of progress was to be encouraged, and that larger infusions of liberty should be poured into the exhausted frames of decayed states. Hence, his sympathies were always on the side of the struggling and the suffering; and, through his powerful voice, the public opinion of America made itself heard and respected in Europe. It is a fact worthy of being stated in this connection, that at the moment when a tempest of obloquy was beating upon him, from his supposed hostility to the cause of freedom here, a very able writer of the Catholic faith, in a striking and, in many respects, admirable essay upon his writings and public life, came reluctantly and respectfully to the conclusion that Mr. Webster had forfeited all claim to the support of Catholic voters, from the countenance he had given to the revolutionary spirit of Europe. Such are ever the judgments of fragmentary men upon a universal man.

His strong sense of the value of the Union, and the force and frequency with which he discoursed upon this theme, are to be explained by the same traits of mind and character. He believed that we were more in danger of diffusion than consolidation. He felt that all the primal instincts of patriotism—all the chords of the heart—bound men to their own State, and not to the common Country; and that with the territorial increase of that country, it became more and more difficult for the central heart to propel to the extremities the life-blood of that invigorating national sentiment, without which a state is but a political corporation without a soul. He knew too, that the name of a Union might exist without the substance, and that a Union for mutual annoyance and defiance, and not for mutual aid and support, which kept the word of promise to the ear and broke it to the hope, was hardly worth the having. Hence, he labored earnestly and perseveringly to inculcate a love of the Union, and to present the whole country as an object to be cherished, honored and valued, because he felt that on that side our affections needed to be quickened and strengthened.

As was to be expected, so powerful a man could not pass through life without encountering strong opposition. All his previous experiences, however, were inconsiderable in comparison with the storm of denunciation which he drew down upon himself by his course on what are commonly called the compromise measures, and, especially, his speech on that occasion. It was natural that men, whose fervid sympathies are wedded to a single idea, should have felt aggrieved by the stand he then took; and if decency and decorum had governed their expressions, neither he nor his friends could have had any right to complain. But, in many cases, the attacks were so foul and ferocious that they lost all claim to be treated as moral judgments, and sunk to the level of the lowest and coarsest effusions of malice and hatred. It is a good rule in politics, as elsewhere, to give men credit for the motives they profess to be actuated by, and to accept their own exposition of their own opinions as true. Let us apply these rules to his course at that time. He had opposed the admission of Texas, and predicted the train of evils which would have come with it. He had warned the North of the perilous questions with which that measure was fraught. But the prophetic voice was unheeded. Between zeal on one side, and apathy on the other, Texas came in. Then war with Mexico followed, ending in conquest, and leaving the whole of that unhappy country at our mercy. Mr. Webster opposed the dismemberment of Mexico, provided for in the treaty of peace, on the ground that no sooner should we have the immense territory which we propose to take, than the question whether slavery should exist there, would agitate the country. But again the warning voice of his wisdom was unheeded, and the storm, which he had predicted, gathered in the heavens. The questions against which he had forewarned his countrymen now clamored for settlement, and would not be put by. They required for their adjustment the most of reason and the least of passion, and they were met in a mood which combined the most of passion and the least of reason. The North and the South met in "angry parle," and the air was darkened with their strife. Mr. Webster's prophetic spirit was heavy within him. He felt that a crisis had arrived in the history of his country, and that the lot of a solemn duty and a stern self-sacrifice had fallen upon him. As he himself said, "he had made up his mind to embark alone on what he was aware would prove a stormy sea, because in that case, should disaster ensue, there would be but one life lost." In this mood of calm and high resolve he went forward to meet the portentous issue.

It is not to be expected that a speech, made under such circumstances, going over so wide a range of exciting topics, should, in every part, command the immediate and entire assent even of those who would admit its truth and seasonableness as a whole. It is also doubtless true, that there are single expressions in it which, when torn from their context, and set by the side of passages from former speeches, dealt with in like manner, will not be found absolutely identical. But the speech of such a man, at such a crisis, is not to be dissected and criticized like a rhetorical exercise. It should be judged as a whole, and read by the light of the occasion which gave it birth.

The judgments which Mr. Webster's course has called forth, were widely diverse. By those who hold extreme views, he was charged with expressing sentiments which he did not believe to be true. It was "a bid for the Presidency," and his conscience was the price he offered. It is a mere waste of words to argue with men of this class. Fanaticism darkens the mind and hardens the heart, and where there is neither common sense nor common charity, the first step in a process of reasoning cannot be taken. Others maintained that he was mistaken in point of fact, that he took counsel of his fears and not of his wisdom, and, that through him, the opportunity was lost of putting down the South in an open struggle for influence and power. But, in the first place, it is not probable that a man, who, upon subordinate questions, had shown so much political wisdom and forecast, should have been mistaken upon a point of such transcendent importance, to which his attention had been so long and so earnestly directed; and, in the second place, the testimony of nearly all men, whose evidence would be received with respect upon any similar subject, fully sustains Mr. Webster in the views he then took of the state of the country, and is equally strong as to the value of the services he rendered. In such an issue, the testimony of retired persons, living among books and their own thoughts, is not entitled to any great value, because they can have no adequate notion of the duties, responsibilities, or difficulties of governing a great State, and what need there is of patience and denunciation in those who are called to this highest of humans functions. A statesman has the right to be tried by his peers.

It is curious to observe how, hatred, whether personal or political, when it enters into the mind, disturbs its functions, as a piece of iron, in the binnacle of a ship, misleads the compass. Many, who have found it so hard to forgive Mr. Webster for his independence in opposing them, would admit the importance of having a class of public men, who will lead the people and not be led by them, and that a great man is never so great, as when withstanding their dangerous wishes, and calmly braving their anger. Their eyes will sparkle when they speak of the neutral countenance of Washington, undismayed by Jacobin clamor, and of the sublime self-devotion of Jay. It is strange that they cannot, or will not, for a moment, look at Mr. Webster's position from a point of view opposite to their own, admit that he may have been in the right, and see him clad in the beauty of self-sacrifice. It is to be feared that this form of virtue is growing more and more rare, as it is more and more needed. The story of Curtius leaping into a gulf in the Roman Forum, in order to save his country, is but the legendary form in which a perpetual truth is clothed. In the path of time there are always chasms of error which only a great self-immolating victim can close. The glory has departed from the land in which that self-devoting stock has died out.

Mr. Webster was an ambitious man. He desired the highest office in the gift of the people. But on this subject, as on all others, there was no concealment in his nature. And ambition is not a weakness, unless it be disproportioned to the capacity. To have more ambition than ability is to be at once weak and unhappy. With him it was a noble passion, because it rested upon noble powers. He was a man cast in a heroic mould. His thoughts, his wishes, his passions, his aspirations, were all on a grander scale than those of other men. Unexercised capacity is always a source of rusting discontent. The height to which men may rise is in proportion to the upward force of their genius, and they will never be calm till they have attained their predestined elevation. Lord Bacon says, "as in nature things move violently to their place, and calmly in their place, so virtue in ambition is violent, in authority settled and calm." Mr. Webster had a giant's brain and a giant's heart, and he wanted a giant's work. He found repose in those strong conflicts and great duties, which crush the weak and madden the sensitive. He thought that, if he were elevated to the highest place, he should so administer the government as to make the country honored abroad, and great and happy at home. He thought, too, that he could do something to make us more truly one people. This, above everything else, was his ambition. And we, who know him better than others, felt that it was a prophetic ambition, and we honored and trusted him accordingly.

As a writer, and as a public speaker, upon the great interests of his country, Mr. Webster stands before us, and will stand before those who come after us, as the leading spirit of his time. Sometimes, indeed, his discussions may have been too grave to be entirely effective, at the moment of their delivery, but all of them are quarries of political wisdom; for while others have solved only the particular problem before them, he has given the rule that reaches all of the same class. As a general remark, his speeches are a striking combination of immediate effectiveness and enduring worth. He never, indeed, goes out of his way for philosophical observations, nor lingers long in the tempting regions of speculation, but his mind, while he advances straight to his main object, drops from its abundant stores those words of wisdom which will keep through all time a vital and germinating power. His logic is vigorous and compact, but there is no difficulty in following his argument, because his reasoning is as clear as it is strong. The leading impression he leaves upon the mind, is that of irresistible weight. We are conscious of a propelling power, before which everything gives way or goes down. The hand of a giant is upon us, and we feel that it is in vain to struggle. The eloquence of Burke, with whom he is always most fitly compared, is like a broad river, winding through a cultivated landscape; that of Mr. Webster, is like a clear mountain stream, compressed between walls of rock.

But his claims as a writer do not rest exclusively upon his political speeches. His occasional discourses, and his diplomatic writings, would alone make a great reputation. His occasional discourses rise above the rest of their class, as the Bunker Hill Monument soars above the objects around it. His Plymouth oration, especially, is a production which all, who have followed in the same path, must ever look upon with admiration, and despair. It was the beginning of a new era in that department of literature. It was the first and greatest of its class; and has naturally fixed a standard of excellence which has been felt in the efforts of all who have come after him. Its merits of style and treatment are of the highest order, and it is marked throughout by that dignity of sentiment and that elevating and stirring tone of moral feeling which lift the mind into regions higher than can be reached by eloquence alone.

His diplomatic writings claim unqualified praise. Such discussions require a cautious as well as firm hand; for a single rash expression, falling upon an explosive state of mind, may shatter to pieces the most hopeful negotiations. Mr. Webster combines great force of statement with perfect decorum of manner. It is the iron hand, but the silken glove. He neither claims nor yields a single inch beyond the right. His attitude is neither aggressive or distrustful. He is strong in himself, and strong in his position. His style is noble, dignified, and transparent. It is the "large utterance" of a great people. I know of no modern compositions which, in form and substance, embody so much of what we understand by the epithet, Roman. Such, indeed, we may imagine the state papers of the Roman Senate to have been, in the best days of the Republic.

His arguments, speeches, occasional discourses, and diplomatic writings, have all a marked family likeness. They are all characterized by strength and simplicity. He never goes out of his way to make a point or drag in an illustration. His ornaments, sparingly introduced, are of that pure gold, which defies the sharpest test of criticism. He had more of imagination, properly so called, than fancy, and his images are more grand than picturesque. He writes like a man who is thinking of his subject, and not of his style, and thus wastes no time upon the mere garb of his thoughts. His mind was so full, that epithet and illustration grew with his words, like flowers on the stalk. It is a striking fact, that a man who has had so great an influence over the mind of America, should have been so free from our national defects; our love of exaggeration, and our excessive use of figurative language. His style is Doric, not Corinthian. His sentences are like shafts hewn from the granite of his own hills—simple, massive, and strong. We may apply to him what Quintilian says of Cicero, that a relish for his writings is itself a mark of good taste. He is always plain; sometimes even homely and unfinished. But a great writer may be, and indeed must be, homely and unfinished at times. Dealing with great subjects, he must vary his manner. Some things he will put in the foreground, and some in the background; some in light, and some in shadow. He will not hesitate, therefore, to say plain things in a plain way. When the glow and impulse of his genius are upon him, he will not stop to adjust every fold in his mantle. His writings will leave upon the mind an effect, like that of the natural landscape upon the eye, where nothing is trim and formal, but where all the sweeps and swells, though rarely conforming to an ideal line of beauty, blend together in a general impression of grace, fertility, and power.

His knowledge of law, politics, and government was profound, various, and exact; but a man of learning, in the sense in which this word is commonly used, he could not be called. His life had been too busy to leave much time for prolonged scientific or literary research; nor had he that passionate love of books which made him content to pass all his leisure hours in his library. He had read much, but not many books. He was a better Latin scholar than the average of our educated men, and he read the Roman authors, to the last, with discriminating relish. A mind like his was naturally drawn to the grand and stately march of Roman genius. With the best English writers he was entirely familiar, and he took great pleasure in reading them, and discussing their merits.

To science, as recorded in books, he had given little time, but he had the faculties and organization which would easily have made him a man of science. He had the senses of an Indian hunter. Of the knowledge that is gathered by observation—as of the names and properties of plants, the song and plumage of birds, and the forms and growth of trees—he had much more than most men of his class. His eye was as accurate as his mind was discriminating. Never was his conversation more interesting than when speaking of natural objects and natural phenomena. His words had the freshness of morning, and seemed to bring with them the breezes of the hills and the fragrance of spring.

Mr. Webster, both as a writer and a speaker, was unequal, and from the nature of his mind and temperament, it could not be otherwise. He was not of an excitable organization, and felt no nervous anxiety lest he should fall below the standard of expectation raised by previous efforts. Hence, he was swayed by the mood, mental or physical, in which each occasion found him. He required a great subject, or a great antagonist, to call forth all his slumbering power. At times, he looked and spoke almost like a superhuman creature; at others, he seemed but the faint reflex of himself. His words fell slowly and heavily from his lips, as if each cost him a distinct effort. The influence, therefore, which he had over popular assemblies, was partly owing to his great weight of character.

He had strong out-of-door tastes, and they contributed to the health of his body and mind. He was a keen sportsman, and a lover of the mountains and the sea. His heart warmed to a fine tree as to the face of a friend. He had that fondness for agriculture and rural pursuits so common among statesmen. Herein the grand scale of the whole man gave direction and character to his tastes. He did not care for minute finish and completeness on a limited scale. He had no love for trim gardens and formal pleasure grounds. His wishes clasped the whole landscape. He liked to see broad fields of clover, with the morning dew upon them, yellow waves of grain, heaving and rolling in the sun, and great cattle lying down in the shade of great trees. He liked to hear the whetting of the mower's scythe, the loud beat of the thresher's flail, and the heavy groan of loaded wagons. The smell of the new-mown hay, and of the freshly turned furrows in spring, was cordial to his spirit. He took especial pleasure in all forms of animal life, and his heart was glad when his cattle lifted up their large-eyed, contemplative faces, and recognized their lord by a look.

His mental powers were commended by a remarkable personal appearance. He was probably the grandest looking man of his time. Wherever he went, men turned to gaze at him; and he could not enter a room without having every eye fastened upon him. His face was very striking, both in form and color. His brow was to common brows, what the great dome of St. Peters is to the smaller cupolas at its side. The eyebrow, the eye, and the dark and deep socket in which it glowed, were full of power; but the great expression of his face lay in the mouth. This was the most speaking and flexible of features, moulded by every mood of feeling, from iron severity to the most captivating sweetness. His countenance changed from sternness to softness with magical rapidity. His smile was beaming, warming, fascinating; lighting up his whole face like a sudden sunrise. His voice was rich, deep, and strong; filling the largest space without effort, capable of most startling and impressive tones, and, when under excitement, rising and swelling into a volume of sound, like the roar of a tempest. His action was simple and dignified; and in his animated moods, highly expressive. Those of us who recall his presence as he stood up here to speak, in the pride and strength of his manhood, have formed from his words, looks, tones, and action, an ideal standard of physical and intellectual power, which we never expect to see approached, but by which we unconsciously try, not only the greatness we meet, but that of which we read.

He was a man more known and admired than understood. His great qualities were conspicuous from afar; but that part of his nature, which he shared with other men, was apprehended by comparatively few. His manners did not always do him justice. For many years of his life, great burdens rested upon him, and, at times, his cares and thoughts settled down darkly upon his spirit, and he was then a man of an awful presence. He required to be loved before he could be known. He, indeed, grappled his friends to him with hooks of steel, but he did not always conciliate those who were not his friends. He had a lofty spirit, which could not stoop or dissemble. He could neither affect what he did not feel, nor desire to conceal what he did. His wishes clung with tenacious hold to everything they grasped, and from those who stood, or seemed to stand, in his way, his countenance was averted. Some, who were not unwilling to become his friends, were changed by his manner into foes. He was social in his nature, but not facile. He was seen to the best advantage among a few old and tried friends, especially in his own home. Then his spirits rose, his countenance expanded, and he looked and moved like a school-boy on a holiday. Conscious that no unfriendly ear was listening to him, his conversation became easy, playful, and natural. His memory was richly stored with characteristic anecdotes, and with amusing reminiscences of his own early life, and of the men who were conspicuous when he was young, all of which he narrated with an admirable mixture of dignity and grace. Those who saw him in these hours of social ease, with his armor off, and the current of his thoughts turning, gently and gracefully, to chance topics and familiar themes, could hardly believe that he was the same man who was so reserved and austere in public.

But it may be asked, had this great man no faults? Surely he had. No man liveth, and sinneth not. There were veins of human imperfection running through his large heart and large brain. But neither men, nor the works of men, should be judged by their defects. Like all eminent persons he fell upon evil tongues; but those who best knew his private life, most honored, venerated, and loved him.

He was a man of strong religious feeling. For theological speculations he had little taste, but he had reflected deeply on the relations between God and the human soul, and his heart was penetrated with a devotional spirit. He had been, from his youth upwards, a diligent student of the Scriptures, and few men, whether clergymen or laymen, were more familiar with their teachings and their language. He had a great reverence for the very words of the Bible, and never used them in any light or trivial connection. He never avoided the subjects of life, death, and immortality, and when he spoke of them, it was with unusual depth of feeling and impressiveness of manner. Within the last few months of his life, his thoughts and speech were often turned upon such themes. He felt that he was an old man, and that it became him to set his house in order. On the eighteenth day of January last, he had completed the threescore and ten years, which are man's allotted portion, and yet his eye was not dim, nor his natural force much abated. But he grew weaker with the approach of summer, and his looks and voice, when he last addressed us from this place, a few months ago, forced upon us the mournful reflection that this great light must soon sink below the horizon. But yet, when the news came that the hand of death was upon him, it startled us like a sudden blow, for he was become so important to us, that we could not look steadily at the thought of losing him. You remember what a sorrow it was that settled down upon our city. The common business of life dragged heavily with us in those days. There was but one expression on the faces of men, and but one question on their lips. We listened to the tidings which came up, hour after hour, from his distant chamber, as men upon the shore in a night of storm, listen to the minute guns of a sinking ship, freighted with the treasures of their hearts. The grief of the people was eager for the minutest details of his closing hours, and he died with his country around his bed. Of the beauty and grandeur of that death I need not speak to you, for it is fixed in your memories and deep in your hearts. It fell upon the whole land like a voice from Heaven. He died calmly, simply, and bravely. He was neither weary of life, nor afraid of death. He died like a husband, a father, a friend, a Christian, and a man; with thoughtful tenderness for all around him, and a trembling faith in the mercy of God. He was not tried by long and hopeless suffering; nor were his friends saddened by seeing the spirit darkened before it was released. His mind like a setting sun, seemed largest at the closing hour. Such a death narrows the dark valley to a span. Such is a midsummer's day at the poles, where sunset melts into sunrise, and the last ray of evening is caught up and appears once more as the first beam of the new morning.

I should not feel that my duty had been wholly discharged, did I not speak of the touching simplicity and solemnity of his funeral. In his will, made a few days before his death, he says, "I wish to be buried without the least show or ostentation, but in a manner respectful to my neighbors, whose kindness has contributed so much to the happiness of me and mine, and for whose prosperity I offer sincere prayers to God." His wishes were faithfully observed, and, in the arrangements for his funeral, there was no recognition of wordly distinction or official rank. He was buried simply as the head of a household, after the manner of New England. But the immense crowds which were there, drawn from all parts of the land by their own veneration and love, formed an element of impressiveness far above all civic pageantry or military honors. Who, that was there present, will ever forget the scene on which fell the rich light of that soft autumnal day. There was the landscape, so stamped with his image and identified with his presence. There were the trees he had planted, the fields over which he had delighted to walk, and the ocean whose waves were music to his ear. There was the house, with its hospitable door; but the stately form of its master did not stand there, with outstretched hand, and smile of welcome. That smile had vanished forever from the earth, and the hand and form was silent, cold, and motionless. The dignity of life had given place to the dignity of death. No narrow chamber held that illustrious dust; no coffin concealed that majestic frame. In the open air, clad as when alive, he lay extended in seeming sleep; with no touch of disfigurement upon his brow; as noble an image of reposing strength as ever was seen upon earth. Around him was the landscape that he had loved, and above him was nothing but the dome of the covering heavens. The sunshine fell upon the dead man's face, and the breeze blew over it. A lover of nature, he seemed to be gathered into her maternal arms, and to lie like a child upon a mother's lap. We felt, as we looked upon him, that death had never stricken down, at one blow, a greater sum of life. And whose heart did not swell, when, from the honored and distinguished men there gathered together from far and near, six plain Marshfield farmers were called forth to carry the head of their neighbor to the grave! Slowly and sadly the vast multitude followed, in mourning silence, and he was laid down to rest among dear and kindred dust. There, among the scenes that he loved in life, he sleeps well. He has left his name and memory to dwell forever upon those hills and valleys, to breathe a more spiritual tone into the winds that blow over his grave, to touch with finer light the line of the breaking wave, to throw a more solemn beauty upon the hues of autumn and the shadows of twilight.

But though his mortal form is there, his spirit is here. His words are written in living light along these walls. May that spirit rest upon us and our children! May those words live in our hearts, and the hearts of those who come after us! May we honor his memory, and show our gratitude for his life, by taking heed to his counsels, and walking in the way on which the light of his wisdom shines!

RESOLVE

Recommending a Convention.

State of Massachusetts Bay.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, }
June 15, 1779. }

WHEREAS, by the returns made into the Secretary's Office, from more than two-thirds of the Towns belonging to this State, agreeably to a Resolve of the General Court, of the 20th of February last, it appears, that a large majority of the inhabitants of such Towns as have made return as aforesaid, think it proper to have a new Constitution or form of Government, and are of opinion, that the same ought to be formed by a Convention of Delegates, who should be specially authorized to meet for this purpose :

Therefore, Resolved, That it be, and it hereby is recommended to the several inhabitants of the several Towns in this State to form a Convention, for the sole purpose of framing a new Constitution, consisting of such number of Delegates, from each Town throughout this State, as every different Town is entitled to send Representatives to the General Court, to meet at Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, on the first day of September next. And the Selectmen of the several Towns and Places within this State, empowered by the laws thereof to send members to the General Assembly, are hereby authorized and directed to call a meeting of their respective Towns, at least fourteen days before the meeting of said Convention, to elect one or more Delegates, to represent them in said Convention, at which meeting, for the election of such Delegate or Delegates, every Freeman, Inhabitant of such town who is twenty-one years of age, shall have a right to vote.

Be it also Resolved, That it be, and it hereby is recommended, to the Inhabitants of the several Towns in this State, to instruct their respective Delegates, to cause a printed copy of the Form of a Constitution they may agree upon in Convention, to be transmitted to the Selectmen of each Town, and the Committee of each Plantation; and the said Selectmen and Committees are hereby empowered and directed to lay the same before their respective Towns and Plantations, at a regular meeting of the Male Inhabitants thereof, being free and twenty-one years of age, to be called for that purpose, in order to its being duly considered and approved or disapproved by said Towns and Plantations. And it is also recommended to the several Towns within this State, to instruct their respective Representatives to establish the said Form of a Constitution, as the Constitution and Form of Government of the State of Massachusetts Bay, if, upon a fair examination, it shall appear that it is approved of by at least two-thirds of those, who are free and twenty-one years of age, belonging to this State, and present in the several meetings.

Sent up for concurrence,

IN COUNCIL, June 17, 1779.

Read and concurred,

JOHN AVERY, Dep'y Sec'y.

Consented to by a Major Part of the Council.

A true copy,

Attest, JOHN AVERY, Dep'y Sec'y.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONVENTION, begun and held at Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, on the first day of September, A. D. 1779, in conformity to the preceding Resolve of the Great and General Court of the State of the Massachusetts Bay, passed the 17th of June last, for the sole purpose of framing a new Constitution of Government for said State.

A. M. WEDNESDAY, 1st Sept. 1779.

A large number of Delegates being convened,

On a motion made and seconded,

Voted, That a President and Secretary be chosen by Ballot,

On a motion made and seconded,

Voted, That a Committee be chosen to receive and sort the votes.

Voted, That the Committee consist of three.

Voted, That NATHANIEL GORHAM, Esq.,

COL. DAWES, and

BRIG'R. BROOKS, be a Committee for this purpose.

On a motion made and seconded,

Voted, That the Convention first proceed to the choice of a Secretary.

The Committee aforesaid accordingly proceeded to receive and sort the votes.

The Committee having reported, it appeared that Samuel Barrett was chosen Secretary.

On a motion made and seconded,

IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD ONE THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND TWENTY.

AN ACT

RELATING TO THE CALLING A CONVENTION OF DELEGATES
OF THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PURPOSE OF REVISING
THE CONSTITUTION.

SECT. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the inhabitants of the several towns, Districts, and places within this Commonwealth, qualified to vote for Senators or Representatives in the General Court, shall assemble in regular town meetings, to be notified in the usual manner, on the third Monday of August next, and shall, in open town meeting, give in their votes, by ballot, on this question: "Is it expedient that Delegates should be chosen, to meet in Convention, for the purpose of revising, or altering the Constitution of Government of this Commonwealth?" And the selectmen of the said towns and districts shall, in open town meeting, receive, sort, count and declare, and the clerks thereof shall, respectively, record the votes given for and against the measure; and exact returns thereof shall be made out, under the hands of a majority of the Selectmen, and of the clerk, who shall seal up and deliver the same to the Sheriff of the county, within one week from the time of meeting, to be by him transmitted to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, on or before the second Monday in September next; or the selectmen may themselves transmit the same to said office, on or before the day last mentioned; and all returns not then made, shall be rejected in the counting. And the Governor and Council shall open and examine the returns made as aforesaid, and count the votes given on the said question; and the Governor shall by public proclamation, to be made on or before the third Monday in said month of September, make known the result, by declaring the number appearing in favor of choosing Delegates for the purpose aforesaid, and the number of votes appearing against the same: And if it shall appear that a majority of the votes given in, and returned as aforesaid, are in favor of choosing delegates as aforesaid, the same shall be deemed and taken to be the will of the people of the Commonwealth, that a Convention should meet accordingly; and in case of such majority, the Governor shall call upon the people to elect delegates, to meet in Convention, in the manner hereinafter provided.

SECT. 2. Be it further enacted, That if it shall be declared by the said proclamation that the majority of votes as aforesaid is in favor of choosing delegates as abovementioned, the inhabitants of the several towns and districts within the Commonwealth, now entitled to send one or more representatives to the General Court, shall, on the third Monday in October next, assemble in town meeting, to be duly notified by warrant from the selectmen, and shall elect one or more delegates, not exceeding the number of representatives to which such town is entitled, to meet delegates from other towns in Convention, for the purposes hereinafter expressed: And at such meeting of the inhabitants, every person entitled to vote for representatives in the General Court shall have a right to vote in the choice of delegates; and the selectmen shall preside at such elections; and shall, in open meeting, receive, sort, count, and declare the votes, and the clerk shall make a record thereof, fair copies of which, attested by the selectmen and clerk, shall be seasonably delivered to each person chosen a delegate as aforesaid. And all the laws now in force, regulating the duty and conduct of town officers, sheriffs, magistrates, and electors, in the elections of governor, lieutenant governor, counsellors, and senators, and representatives, shall, as far as applicable, apply and be in full force and operation as to all meetings holden, and elections and returns made under this act, or which, by this act, are required to be holden or made, and upon the like forfeitures and penalties.

SECT. 3. Be it further enacted, That the persons so elected delegates shall meet in Convention, in the State House in Boston, on the third Wednesday in November next; and they shall be the judges of the returns and election of their own members, and may adjourn from time to time, and one hundred of the persons elected shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; and they shall proceed, as soon as may be, to organize themselves in Convention, by choosing a president, and such other officers as they may deem expedient, and by establishing proper rules of proceeding; and when organized, they may take into consideration the propriety and expediency of making any, and if any, what alterations or amendments in the present Constitution of Government of the Commonwealth; and such amendments, when made and adopted by the said Convention, shall be submitted to the people for their ratification and adoption, in such manner as the said Convention shall direct; and if ratified by the people in the manner directed by the said Convention, the Constitution shall be deemed and taken to be altered or amended accordingly; and if not so ratified, the present Constitution shall be and remain the Constitution of Government of this Commonwealth.

SECT. 4. Be it further enacted, That the said Convention shall establish the pay or compensation of its officers and members, and the expense of its session; and His Excellency, the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, is authorized to draw his warrant on the Treasurer therefor.

SECT. 5. Be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Commonwealth be and he hereby is directed, forthwith, after the passage thereof, to transmit printed copies of this Act to the selectmen of every town and district within the said Commonwealth; and whenever the Governor shall issue his proclamation, calling upon the people to elect delegates, to meet in Convention as aforesaid, the said Secretary shall also, immediately thereafter, transmit printed copies of said proclamation, attested by himself, to the selectmen of every town and district in said Commonwealth. [Approved by the Governor, June 16th, 1820.]

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD ONE THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND FIFTY-TWO.

AN ACT

RELATING TO THE CALLING A CONVENTION OF DELEGATES
OF THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PURPOSE OF REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

SECT. 1. The inhabitants of the several cities, towns, districts, and places within this Commonwealth, qualified to vote for senators or representatives in the General Court, shall, on the second Monday of November next, at the meetings to be then held in the several cities and towns in the Commonwealth, for the choice of governor, lieutenant-governor, senators and representatives in the General Court, an article for this purpose being inserted in the warrants calling said meetings, give in their votes by ballot on this question: "Is it expedient that delegates should be chosen to meet in convention for the purpose of revising or altering the constitution of government of this Commonwealth?" And the vote upon said question shall be in open meeting, and the votes in the several cities and towns in the Commonwealth shall be received, sorted, counted, declared, and transmitted to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in the same manner as the votes for governor, lieutenant-governor, and senators are now received, sorted, counted, declared and transmitted by the constitution and laws of the Commonwealth; and all returns not thus made shall be rejected in the counting. And the governor and council shall open and examine the returns, made as aforesaid, and count the votes given on the said question; and the governor shall, by public proclamation, to be made on or before the first Wednesday in January next, make known the result, by declaring the number appearing in favor of choosing delegates for the purpose aforesaid, and the number of votes appearing against the same; and if it shall appear that a majority of the votes given in and returned as aforesaid are in favor of choosing delegates as aforesaid, the same shall be deemed and taken to be the will of the people of the Commonwealth, that a convention should meet accordingly; and in case of such majority, the governor shall call upon the people to elect delegates to meet in convention, in the manner hereinafter provided.

SECT. 2. If it shall be declared by the said proclamation, that the majority of votes, as aforesaid, is in favor of choosing delegates, as above-mentioned, the inhabitants of the several cities and towns within the Commonwealth, now entitled any one year to send one or more representatives to the General Court, shall, on the first Monday of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, assemble in their several meetings, to be duly notified by warrant from the selectmen of the several towns and the mayor and aldermen of the several cities, and shall elect one or more delegates, not exceeding the number of representatives to which each town or city was entitled last year, it being the year in which the valuation of estates in the Commonwealth was settled, to meet delegates from other towns and cities in convention, for the purposes hereinafter expressed. And at such meetings of the inhabitants, every person entitled to vote for representatives in the General Court, shall have a right to vote in the choice of delegates, and the same officers, in the several cities and towns in the Commonwealth, shall preside at such elections, as now preside in the choice of representatives to the General Court; and the votes for said delegates shall be received, sorted, counted, declared, recorded, and copies thereof delivered to the delegates chosen, in the same manner as is now provided for in the case of representatives to the General Court. And all laws now in force, regulating the duty and conduct of town and city officers, sheriffs, magistrates, and electors, in the election of governor, lieutenant-governor, senators, and representatives, shall, as far as applicable, apply, and be in full force and operation, as to all meetings holden, and elections and returns made, under this act, or which by this act are required to be holden or made, and upon the like forfeitures and penalties.

SECT. 3. The persons so elected delegates shall meet in convention in the state house, in Boston, on the first Wednesday in May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty three; and they shall be the judges of the returns and elections of their own members, and may adjourn from time to time; and one hundred of the persons elected shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; and they shall proceed as soon as may be to organize themselves in convention, by choosing a president and such other officers as they may deem expedient, and by establishing proper rules of proceeding; and when organized, they may take into consideration the propriety and expediency of revising the present constitution of government of this Commonwealth, or the propriety and expediency of making any, and if any, what alterations or amendments, in the present constitution of government of this Commonwealth. And such alterations or amendments, when made and adopted by the said convention, shall be submitted to the people for their ratification and adoption, in such manner as the said convention shall direct; and if ratified by the people in the manner directed by the said convention, the constitution shall be deemed and taken to be altered or amended accordingly; and if not so ratified, the present constitution shall be and remain the constitution of government of this Commonwealth.

SECT. 4. The said convention shall establish the pay or compensation of its officers and members, and the expense of its session; and his excellency the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the council, is authorized to draw his warrant on the treasury therefor.

SECT. 5. The Secretary of the Commonwealth is hereby directed forthwith, after the passage thereof, to transmit printed copies of this act to the selectmen of each town, and the mayor and aldermen of each city within the Commonwealth; and whenever the governor shall issue his proclamation, calling upon the people to elect delegates, to meet in convention as aforesaid, the said secretary shall also, immediately thereafter, transmit printed copies of said proclamation, attested by himself, to the selectmen of each town, and the mayor and aldermen of each city, in the Commonwealth. [Approved, May 7, 1852.]

FIRST INAUGURAL MESSAGE

GOVERNOR JOHN HANCOCK.

As a matter of interest to the present generation, we have copied from the first volume of the Journals of the House of Representatives, after the adoption of the Constitution of 1780, the first Inaugural Message of Governor John Hancock. It is a document replete with sound patriotism, wise maxims, and good counsel, and our friends will find themselves well repaid for the time spent in its perusal.

His Excellency the Governor was pleased to make the following speech :

Gentlemen of the Senate and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

With a sincere and warm heart I congratulate you and my country on the singular favor of Heaven in the peaceable and auspicious settlement of our government upon a Constitution framed by the wisdom, and sanctified by the solemn choice of the people who are to live under it. May the Supreme Ruler of the world be pleased to establish and perpetuate the new foundations of liberty and glory.

Finding myself placed at the head of this Commonwealth by the free suffrages of its citizens, while I most sensibly feel the distinction they have conferred upon me in the election, I am at a loss to express the sentiments of gratitude with which it has impressed me. In addition to my natural affection for them, and the obligations they have before laid upon me, I have now a new and irresistible motive ever to consider their happiness as my greatest interest, and their freedom my highest honor.

Deeply impressed with a sense of the important duties to which my country now calls me, while I obey the call, I most ardently wish myself adequate to those duties, but can only promise, in concurrence with you, gentlemen, a faithful and unremitting attention to them, supported as I am by the advice and assistance of the Council, happily provided by the Constitution, to whose judgment I shall always pay the greatest respect, and on whose wisdom and integrity I shall ever rely. May unanimity among the several branches of this new government consolidate its force, and establish such measures as shall most effectually advance the interest and reputation of the Commonwealth. This can never be done but by a strict adherence, in every point, to the principles of our excellent Constitution, which, on my own part, I engage most sacredly to preserve.

Gentlemen,—Of all the weighty business that lies before you, a point of the first importance, and most pressing necessity is the establishment of the army in such consistency and force, and with such seasonable and competent supplies, as may render it, in conjunction with the respectable forces sent to our assistance by our powerful and generous ally, an effectual defence to the free Constitutions and Independence of the United States. You cannot give too early or too serious an attention to that proportion of this business that falls to the share of this Commonwealth. The mode, we have too long practised, of reinforcing the army by enlistments for a short time has been found to be at once greatly ineffectual and extremely burdensome. The commander-in-chief, in whose abilities and integrity we justly repose the highest confidence, has repeatedly stated to us the great disadvantages from it; and the necessity of an army engaged for the whole war, and well provided, is now universally felt and acknowledged.

Nor should a moment of time be lost in prosecuting every measure for establishing an object so essential to the preservation of our liberties and all that is dear to us. Care at the same time ought to be taken that the necessary supplies be committed to men on whose principles and affection to our great cause, as well as capacity for such a service, we may safely depend.

The support of the public faith stands in close connection with this measure of defence, and indeed is absolutely necessary to it, and to the whole interest and honor of the State.

No expedient should be unexplored—no necessary measure unattempted—no nerve in government or the community unexerted to maintain our credit, and remove all just ground of complaint from the army that protects us, or from those who have, in any instance, relied on the public engagements. What friend to his country would not cheerfully bear his full proportion of the expense necessary for this purpose? And I doubt not you will take all possible care that no more than such a proportion be laid upon any man, or any class of men. This is not only a clear point of justice, from which no government can in any instance recede without injuring and dishonoring itself, but is of particular importance to the interest, peace and good temper, and consequently the safety of the Commonwealth. Doth not this safety also require a stricter attention than I fear has been paid to the methods and purpose of an intercourse with Great Britain; and that more effectual measures may be taken to prevent flags of truce from conveying intelligence, or improper persons, to those who are prosecuting a war against us with great insidiousness as well as cruelty; to cut off a correspondence between our secret enemies at home, and our declared ones abroad; and to restrain prisoners of war from being at large among us without prudent checks, especially in our seaports. In all such cases your vigilance will discern, and your fidelity provide, where it may be needed, a proper guard to the public safety.

The present situation of the eastern part of this State, and the protection of our sea-coasts, navigation and commerce, in all which not only the interest of this and the United States, but that of our allies is deeply concerned, are important objects that require particular attention. If we look to the westward, we see recent incursions and ravages of the enemy; so that from every quarter we are loudly called upon to employ the most speedy and strenuous efforts for providing funds that may be depended on, establishing an army sufficient, by the blessing of Heaven, for the complete deliverance of our country; its resources, improved with judgment and spirit, are adequate to such a purpose. Nor can I forbear to observe, that we may enter upon this business immediately, with less expense and greater advantage than in any future time.

You are fully sensible, gentlemen, that the separation which the Constitution has made between the legislative and judicial powers, and that just degree of independence it has given to the latter, is one of the surest guards of the persons, property and liberties of the subjects of this Commonwealth, and accordingly you are, I am thoroughly persuaded, heartily disposed to support this independence and the honor and vigor of the supreme judicial department in its whole constitutional extent.

Sensible of the importance of Christian piety and virtue to the order and happiness of a State, I cannot but earnestly recommend to you every measure for their support and encouragement, that shall not infringe the rights of conscience, which I rejoice to see established by the Constitution on so broad a basis. And if anything can be further done on the same basis, for the relief of the public teachers of religion and morality,—an order of men greatly useful to their country, and who have particularly suffered in the defence of its rights by the depreciation of our currency—as also for the relief of widows and orphans, many of whom have been distressed in the same, and who are particularly committed by Heaven to the protection of civil rulers, I shall most readily concur with you in every such measure. A due observation of the Lord's Day is not only important to internal religion, but greatly conducive to the order and benefit of civil society. It speaks to the senses of mankind, and, by a solemn cessation from their common affairs, reminds them of a Deity and their accountability to the great Lord of all.

Whatever may be necessary to the support of such an institution, in consistence with a reasonable personal liberty, deserves the attention of civil government. Manners, by which not only the freedom but the very existence of republics are greatly affected, depend much upon the public institutions of religion and the good education of youth. In both these instances our fathers laid wise foundations, for which their posterity have had reason to bless their memory. The public schools and our University at Cambridge, very early founded by them, have been no small support to the cause of liberty, and given no dishonorable distinction to our country. The advantage they are still capable of affording to the present and future generations are unspeakable. I cannot, therefore, omit warmly to commend them to your care and patronage. The laws will now require to be accurately revised, and particularly that which regulates the militia, on which the safety of a Commonwealth naturally rests. This revision you cannot fail to attend to as early as circumstances will allow, which will lead you not only to adapt the laws in the most perfect manner possible to the defence of the State, but also for the suppression of idleness, dissipation, extravagance, and all those vices that are peculiarly inimical to free republics, and for the encouragement of those opposite virtues that are particularly friendly to such a form of government. In such measures as I have now mentioned, and in every other tending to promote the public welfare, you may always depend on my cheerful concurrence with you, and giving every despatch in my power to the public business; and shall, from time to time, seasonably communicate to you such information and proposals of business as may be proper to lay before you.

May this new government diffuse a new animation through the whole political body. The people expect much from it, perhaps more, in some points, than circumstances will allow it to, perform; but, standing as we do upon their choice and affections, and strenuously exerting ourselves, as we ought, for their interest, they may find it happily advanced.

May Heaven assist us to sit well, to brighten the auspices of our Constitution, to render it still more loved and admired by the citizens of this Commonwealth, and to recommend it to the whole world, by a wise and impartial, a firm and vigorous administration of it.

JOHN HANCOCK.

HON. ELIHU C. BAKER,

PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

ONE of the natural results of revolutions in political parties is to bring men, before unknown to the public, into prominent and influential positions. It is an axiom with philosophers that crises always produce the men that are wanted,—that with the hour always comes the man, although, according to a recent writer on the conduct of the war in the Crimea, by the Allies, that great crisis in the affairs of the world has not yet produced a controlling mind—no will that can direct the storm.

The offices of state, in our Commonwealth, are filled by comparatively new men. During a long series of years, the State was under the political dynasty of one great party, and the men who were brought forward by them, successively, to fill the posts of honor in the Commonwealth, begun their political life early, and served, as it were, for years in subordinate positions before they were elevated to high stations. Hence we have seen our executive chair filled, since 1825, by Lincoln, Everett, Davis, Briggs, Washburn, and Clifford, of the Whig party, and by Morton and Boutwell of the Democratic, all of them known as having served a regular apprenticeship in politics, before they were called upon to be leaders. Besides, all other important posts were filled by well known members of either of the great parties.

The revolution of 1854, however, carried hitherto dominant parties beneath the wave, and brought to the surface a new party organization, with new and untried leaders. Here was a crisis in our political history, and they who had almost grown to their seats of office,—with whom the reins of government were as familiar as their own reins,—were called upon, suddenly, to abdicate. But the men whom the Commonwealth needed to stand at the helm were found, and they this day conduct affairs in accordance with the expressed will of a majority of the legal voters thereof. Our official prayer, "GOD SAVE THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS," will always be answered in mercy, so long as education is cherished, and moral culture and religious truths are the chief foundations of our state policy. Nor will the offices of the Commonwealth ever be unworthily filled when the incumbents are to be chosen from such a people.

HON. ELIHU C. BAKER, the President of the Senate, is one of the youngest members of that body. He was born in Campton, N. H., in August, 1825, and is consequently in the 31st year of his age. His first legislative year was in 1855. He came to the Senate entirely unused to legislative business, but in a short time he took a prominent position as a debater, and as an influential and efficient legislator.

We are not informed as to what Mr. Baker's politics were before he joined the American party, but, from the tenor of his speeches and the direction of his votes, we judge him to be democratic in his tendencies. His style of debate is forcible, energetic, and attractive. He is full of matter and never fails to secure the close attention of his auditors. His arguments are ingenious, and they are elucidated with much clearness. If he does not rise to the high position of a finished orator, he never sinks to tameness and insipidity. There is a manliness in his mode of debating a subject which always commands respect.

Mr. Baker is evidently a self-educated man. If this sort of education does not impart grace and finish to a man's mental endowments, it establishes him in vigor. What he knows, he owes to his own unaided efforts. Every step of his way has been through difficulties and obstacles which have been removed with infinite labor. But when the path has been cleared, the mind stands on vantage ground which none but the self-dependent learner can appreciate. He looks back upon the paths he has trod as upon a domain achieved by his own exertions.

A man who has thus made an entrance into the fields of learning is rarely contented to stop short in his career. Every new success but prompts him to higher attainments and greater achievements. As the prospect before him unfolds, as his intellect expands, he pants for knowledge, as the "hart panteth for the water-brook." The capacity of man for intellectual growth is boundless as the sea. "All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full." So with the mind of man;—let all the springs of knowledge be opened to him and minister to him unceasingly, yet is he never filled.

Mr. Baker has been engaged in mercantile life, but he is turning to more congenial pursuits. The law now claims his attention, and he is preparing himself for that arduous profession. We cannot doubt that he will bring to it a mind thoroughly disciplined, a power of analysis and a force of argument that will lead him to success.

Our President is not, by any means, unduly elated by his elevation to official station. He wears his budding honors with dignity and propriety. As a presiding officer he is prompt and decisive. His acts have, thus far, been acceptable to all parties. His appointments of committees have been impartial and discriminating, and his whole course indicates that he is mainly anxious to acquit himself of the duties of his high office with strict rectitude of purpose.

In personal appearance, Mr. Baker looks youngish. He has a fine expressive face, but is not, by any means, a beauty. He seems to enjoy life in the blessings of good health, muscular energy, and power of endurance. He has, we infer, a strong will of his own, which, when greatly exercised, would not stop far short of obstinacy. He is, we judge, inclined to be opinionated, though he seldom takes a position that is not tenable, and is never at a loss to give a reason for the faith that is in him. He has an expansive forehead, an intellectual look, and a face of energy, determination and independence. He is a rising man, and, with a proper use of the powers which God has given, a proud career and a noble future is before him.

HON. CHARLES A. PHELPS, SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives is the largest legislative body in the United States, and is only exceeded in numbers by the British House of Commons, which is composed of 658 members, and the House of Lords, which has 448 members. The House of Representatives in Congress numbers but 234 members. The Massachusetts House, this year, has 329 members.

Perhaps the office of Speaker of the House is as difficult a post as a young and inexperienced man can be elevated to, and if he succeeds in discharging its duties acceptably, he has established for himself a position and a reputation which no circumstances can detract from; if he discharges them to his own satisfaction, he has achieved a victory, indeed, of which he may well be proud. A speaker, to acquit himself creditably, must possess firmness, readiness, a quick eye and ear, a clear perception, a good voice, business talents, an aptitude for parliamentary law, and a manner that will command respect.

These are rare qualities to be combined in one person. Our present Speaker, however, has given excellent indications that he possesses them in no small measure, and is every way equal to the task before him. The only thing in which he showed a hesitancy on first assuming the chair,—a want of familiarity with the routine of the speakership,—is fast disappearing. Under his prompt and judicious administration the public business is despatched without unnecessary delay. He is prompt and decisive, has a clear, sonorous voice, which is of great advantage to every member in the House. If the members second him in his energy, and they seem well disposed to do so, we shall not only have a short session, which is so highly desirable in the present juncture of affairs, but the legislation of 1856 will be despatched in a business-like manner.

Mr. Phelps is serving his second legislative year. One might argue from this that his legislative experience is limited. But it does not follow that a man who has sat for years in legislative halls is necessarily experienced; nor does it follow that one who has never sat as a member is necessarily inexperienced. The fact is, the observant, thoughtful, and reflecting man, is daily qualifying himself for any position to which he may be called. There are not a few spectators of the proceedings of legislative bodies, who never sat as members, who could instruct even veterans in parliamentary law. The Speaker has had, perhaps, the best training it was possible to give him to qualify himself for his duties. In early life, he enjoyed the rare advantage of listening to the conversation of public men, on all topics of great public interest. Their conversations took the form of debates and were governed by rules. This early initiation into a consideration of grave questions by prominent public men, was of the last importance to the embryo Speaker, in developing and forming his mind and stamping his character.

The Speaker was born in Boston, Oct. 19th, 1820, and is, therefore, in the 36th year of his age. He comes from a legislative family,—if we may so term it. His father, Dr. Abner Phelps, was a member of the House from Boston, in 1826, when he made the first proposition for a railroad from Boston to the Hudson River—and for three years following. His grandfather, Eliakim Phelps, was an influential member of the House from Belchertown half a century ago, and was elected for eleven successive years. He was, also, a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1820.

Young Phelps received his primary education in the Boston public schools, and fitted for college partly at the Boston Latin School, partly at Phillips Academy, Andover, and partly with private tutors, no expense being spared in his education. At Andover he resided in the family of the late Professor Stuart, a maternal relative, whose energy and enthusiasm of character must have had an influence on a young man to impress his mind.

He entered Yale as Freshman, in 1838, but, to save time, left in three months and entered Union College, at Schenectady, as Sophomore, under Dr. Nott, whence he graduated in 1841 with distinguished honors. After a three years' course of medical study at Boston and Philadelphia, he received his degree of doctor of medicine at Harvard University, 1844, and the same year entered the holy bonds of matrimony, taking for his partner and help-mate the sister of Judge Ira Harris, of Albany.

Mr. Phelps, now settled in life, devoted himself to the practice of his profession with eminent success. He continued unremittingly until 1850, when, desirous of relaxation, he determined upon making the tour of Europe, where he remained a year, visiting nearly every capital, enlarging and expanding his mind by acute and accurate observations. He frequented, when in London, both Houses of Parliament, and in Paris, the Chamber of Deputies, where he had an opportunity of listening to the most eminent orators of Great Britain and France.

On his return he again devoted himself to his profession, and though always well informed on all the great political questions of the day, never engaged actively in the arena until 1855, when he entered heartily into the American movement, and made his first political speeches for the advancement of that cause. He was elected member of the House in 1855, and at once took a commanding position among his colleagues. It was seriously contemplated to nominate him for Speaker then, but it transpiring that he would not consent to stand, his claims were not pressed.

Mr. Phelps is essentially a worker. He improves his time. Whatever thing his hands find to do, he does it with all his might. Ever attentive to the business of the House, he prevents complications of business that would accumulate around and embarrass a less careful man.

We consider it a matter of congratulation that one who commences a high career so promisingly has been elected by the members for their presiding officer.

WALTER BARTLETT,	{ Post, Courier, Traveller, Transcript.
J. R. PEMBER,	Advertiser.
THOMAS BRADLEY,	Herald.

This, I learn, was the last of the series issued in a pamphlet form; the circulation not being enough to pay the expense, the members of the Legislature having but a small portion of the copies for which they were ordered to pay. The Journal of the House was soon afterward bimodular, and this series was discontinued. Successor is comes by 1898.
